A spectacular fire visible for miles engulfed a 150-foot bait barge off 68th Place between the beach and the breakwater early today, lighting up the waterfront for miles as Coast Guard and Harbor fireboats battled the blaze. No one was aboard the barge.

Yule grim for jobless, now at 6 million and growing

Combined News Services

Six million Americans are jobless this Christmas and a million more will be thrown out of work in the next few months in the longest and most severe recession since World War II, labor and business economists said Tuesday.

"It's a grim Christmas," said Mark Roberts, chief economist of the AFL-CIO in Washington.

Roberts predicted the number of unemployed could reach 6.5 million, or 7 per cent of the nation's work force by the end of the month, and approach 7 million, or about 7.5 per cent, early next year.

Elliot Grossman, economist for The Conference Board, a nonprofit business research organization, said a jobless rate of 7 per cent "is possible by the end of January" and even more persons will be laid off in the first half of 1975.

"I think it is going to become a deeper recession," Grossman said. "In three to five months it will bottom out, but employment will lag behind the pickup in production by a couple of months."

The recession, which most economists believe began in November, 1973, is not expected to end until mid-1975, making it twice as long — and perhaps the most severe — of any economic slump since the end of World War II.

The Labor Department said Tuesday that another 155,900 persons claimed unemployment benefits in the week ended Dec. 7, a boost of three-tenths of one per cent from just a week earlier.

Thirty-eight states posted higher volumes to bring the over-all jobless rate for those covered by unemployment insurance to 4.8 per cent, or about 3,123,300 persons. A year earlier that rate was 2.8 per cent, or 1,715,300 persons.

Pope 'knocks down' wall to open 1975 Holy Year

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI opened the 1975 Holy Year Tuesday night by knocking three times with a silver hammer on the holy door of St. Peter's Basilica to beg mankind's entry into the kingdom of peace and justice.

He issued the 2,000-year-old invitation for Jesus to return to earth and prayed that the Holy Year, celebrated every 25 years by the Catholic Church, would see the end of war.

MILLIONS of persons around the world watched via satellite television as the 77-year-old pontiff, wearing a white wool and golden silk-trimmed cloak in the chilly Christmas eve, took the hammer in his right hand and raised it before the concrete door sealed 25 years ago.

He struck the first of three blows on the metal cross fixed in the door's center, asking:

The Sistine Chapel

choir, standing near him in the basilica porch, responded:

"I want to enter them and render thanks unto the Lord."

He rapped again, saying:

"This is the door of the Lord."

"THROUGH it shall enter the just," the choir sang.

"I shall enter into your house, O Lord," the Pope said as he swung the hammer, designed by sculptor Amerigo Tot, for the final time.

"I shall prostrate myself in adoration of your temple," the choir responded.

At 11:42 p.m. (2:42 p.m. PDT) the top section of the door opened inward, controlled by a series of pulleys that slowly lowered it to the marble floor of the basilica's interior.

Dark-suited laymen and priests swept away the loose debris of the door with straw brooms, white sponges and towels.

Leaning heavily on two aides, the Pope spoke in a weak, slightly breaking voice as he opened the Holy Year. He then presided over a midnight mass for the diplomatic corps in the Vatican.

In his final exhortation before Tuesday night's opening ceremony, the Pope warned of "seeds of disintegration" growing within the Church and said Holy Year should be a period of ending dissent through reconciliation.

This Holy Year ceremony was the first ever televised. It was directed by Italian film-maker Franco Zeffirelli, and Italian television officials said only the landing of man on the moon was telecast to a larger potential audience.

Food costs still rising in marts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A typical American food basket cost $3.15 more per week in November than it did the same month a year ago, the Agriculture Department reported Tuesday.

Another substantial jump in marketing costs pushed the annual retail price of the basket up $19 to a record of $1,798 last month, according to the Christmas Eve report.

It showed the November retail price, converted to a weekly basis, was $34.57, compared with consumer costs for the same foods of $34.21 weekly in October and $31.42 a year earlier.

The retail cost, which hit a new peak for the fourth consecutive month despite a decline in average prices farmers got for the basket foods, was 10 per cent above a year earlier.

The data showed returns to farmers for items in the basket — a selection of foods needed to supply a theoretical average household of 3.2 persons for a year — dropped to a weekly rate of $13.89 in November, down 23 cents or 1.7 per cent from October.

Middlemen's charges, however, rose 59 cents on a weekly basis (3 per cent) to a new record of $20.69. This yielded a net increase of 36 cents in the weekly consumer bill.

COMPARED with a year earlier, farmer returns for the foods in the November basket were up 23 cents weekly, or 1.7 per cent. But middlemen's charges for marketing and processing the basket foods were up $2.92, or 16.5 per cent, to produce the $3.15 weekly increase for consumers.

The figures underlined earlier Agriculture Department assertions that most of this year's 15 per cent increase in retail food costs compared with the 1973 average has been due to higher marketing costs.

Officials estimate that more than 80 per cent of the extra money paid by consumers this year is going into a 21 per cent gain in marketing costs — triple the biggest previous annual increase.

It showed that despite higher average retail levels, consumers in November were paying less than a year earlier for a few major foods including beef, pork and eggs.

PRESIDENT FORD, skiing smoothly, leads part of his entourage down the Simba run at Vail, Colo., Tuesday.

By FRANK CORMIER
VAIL, Colo. (AP) — President Ford displayed his skiing prowess Tuesday between work sessions before joining family and friends for a buffet dinner and Christmas Eve church services.

Ford let reporters and photographers record two presidential runs down a two-mile intermediate trail that reddened his face and left him breathless. Those who could ski, a distinct minority of the press corps, were allowed to follow him as he flawlessly navigated the steep, tree-lined "Simba" trail.

Another skier cut across the President's path at one point. Ford altered course a bit, and the two passed each other without difficulty.

"I'm happy to say I've taken no spill today — knock on wood," Ford told newsmen afterward.

Son Steven, 18, and daughter Susan, 17, skied with their father. Mrs. Ford remained at the family's rented chalet.

Before his 2½-hour outing, Ford studied reports relayed from Washington with staff coordinator Donald Rumsfeld and Press Secretary Ron Nessen. He worked on pend-

Helms, CIA man conflict on 'spying'

Israelis guard pilgrims at Bethlehem

Associated Press

BETHLEHEM, Occupied Jordan (AP) — Christmas came to the town of Christ's birth with carol music sounding from the Judean hillsides where an angel gave shepherds "good tidings of great joy" nearly 2,000 years ago.

No shepherds were watching their flocks by night this Yuletide. Instead, as pilgrims sang, Israeli troops patrolled the hills in a night watch against possible sabotage by Palestinian guerrillas. The Israeli army and the armies of Lebanon, Syria and Egypt were on alert along the Middle East cease-fire lines.

While soldiers guarded the ancient Church of the Nativity, above the traditional stable of Jesus' birth; Christmas was ushered in by a pontifical High Mass.

With bells ringing over Bethlehem, the Roman Catholic patriarch of Jerusalem, Msgr. Giacomo Giuseppe Beltritti, placed an olive wood doll of the Christ child on a silver star in the stable, now a marble vault beneath the church.

Worshippers — many of them diplomats and dignitaries — followed the Mass in the adjacent Church of St. Catherine. The proceedings were shown on a television screen to crowds in Manger Square outside.

Most of the watchers in the square, where choirs sang carols and the Christmas tree shone with lights, were local residents, mingling with a few tourists and pilgrims. Moslems in the town were celebrating their own Feast of the Sacrifice.

Mayor Elias Freij, a Christian Arab, complained that the Israeli security kept pilgrims away but the Ministry of Tourism said 15,000 would visit the hilltop town.

The mayor shrugged off a Palestine Liberation Organization warning that visitors could get hit in the guerrilla war against Israel and said, "The town is safe. Not a single Arab has ever tried to disturb the Christmas celebrations in Bethlehem."

Freij failed to mention the first Christmas after Israel captured Bethlehem in 1967, when Arabs blew up an electric pylon and cut off Christmas communications to the town.

Israel was taking no chances this year. Booths were erected outside the tiny door of the church — built waist-high to prevent invaders from riding horses into the basilica — so that suspected worshippers could be searched for explosives or arms. Roadblocks sealed off the town, and only visitors carrying passes from the Israeli government were admitted. An army helicopter kept watch, and troops were posted on rooftops. Pilgrims appeared unperturbed by the soldiers.

"I have no objection," said C.O. Rupe of Elkhart, Ind., a chemical consultant. "I feel perfectly safe here."

Briton fled 'incredible pressures'

Combined News Services

John Stonehouse, a former British cabinet minister, said after his arrest by police Tuesday that he fled to Australia to escape "incredible pressures" of business activities and blackmail threats.

Stonehouse, 49, was arrested as an illegal immigrant who entered Australia Dec. 10 on a British passport under a falsified identity after disappearing from Miami Beach, Fla., where police feared he had been slain.

While waiting in custody for a court appearance the day after Christmas, he sent a cable to British Prime Minister Harold Wilson apologizing for his disappearance. The cable, released in London, said:

"My wish was to release myself from the incredible pressures being put on me, particularly in my business activities and various attempts at blackmail. I considered, clearly wrongly, that the best action I could take was to create a new identity and attempt to live a new life away from these pressures."

"I suppose this can be summed up as a brainstorm, or a mental breakdown. I can only apologize to you and all the others who have been troubled by this business."

Stonehouse, who has extensive business interests, did not elaborate on the "attempts at blackmail." But his disappearance from the United States triggered a wave of newspaper reports that he was alleged to have been a spy for the Central Intelligence Agency and Czechoslovakian Communists.

Wilson told the House of Commons the reports were wrong.

Supt. Leslie Patterson, chief of the Melbourne Criminal Investigation Bureau, said Stonehouse was arrested in the seaside suburb of St. Kilda, where he had been staying since checking out of a downtown hotel shortly after his arrival in Australia.

Stonehouse, minister for aviation in Wilson's first government in 1966, dropped from sight after he left a Miami hotel to go for a swim.

Shortly afterward, Miami police reported they had found traces of a body encased in cement—a gangland-type "burial." The police said the body could be Stonehouse's.

Patterson would not disclose the name Stonehouse used to enter Australia, but he exhibited a British passport in the name of J.A. Maughan, which was presumably the one used to gain entry at Perth, Western Australia. The method Stonehouse used to travel to Australia was not explained.

"He has now admitted he is the missing member of parliament from England, a Mr. Stonehouse," Patterson said.

"He admits he entered Australia with a false passport. At this stage inquiries are being made overseas and here to see if he may have broken any law."

Patterson described Stonehouse as "in good health" and said he had spoken by telephone to his wife, Barbara, in London and she may fly to Australia.

Hoffa

Attorneys for former Teamsters Union chief James Hoffa argued Tuesday there are basic differences in his fight to get a commutation restriction lifted and a similar case decided Monday by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The court held that the President has the constitutional right to impose conditions when he grants a pardon or commutes a prison sentence in a case involving a former army sergeant convicted of murder.

The sergeant, Maurice Schick, was sentenced to death in 1954 by a court-martial in the slaying of an 8-year-old girl. His sentence was commuted in 1960 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower on the condition he never be eligible for parole.

Hoffa was granted a commutation of his 13-year sentence for jury tampering and mail fraud by President Richard M. Nixon in 1971 after serving almost five years of the sentence in a federal prison. The commutation carried a restriction barring Hoffa from engaging in union activities until March 1980.

Hoffa and his attorneys contend the restriction is not binding and have started legal proceedings in an attempt to get the ban lifted.

Wayne

John Wayne's Christmas present was a release from Hoag Memorial Hospital in Newport Beach Tuesday following surgery to correct an old football knee injury.

A hospital spokesman said, "Mr. Wayne is on his way home to spend the holiday with his wife and children."

Wayne was operated on last Tuesday to repair a torn cartilage in his right knee, injured during the 1920s when he was a member of the USC football team.

Rockefeller

Vice President Nelson Rockefeller will relax over Christmas at his Pocantico Hills estate in New York before leaving Thursday for a one-week vacation in Puerto Rico.

With the prolonged confirmation hearings behind him, Rockefeller already has named a number of members of the new staff he will take with him to the capital.

In Puerto Rico, he will stay at his private Dorado Beach resort. After the seven-day rest, he is scheduled to set up his office in Washington and move temporarily to his own mansion in the capital while remodeling continues on the new vice presidential residence at the Naval Observatory.

Flagpole

Vernon Woodridge, a flagpole sitter who was knocked off his 30-foot pole by a gust of wind, was in good condition Monday at Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital.

Woodridge had lived on a platform atop the pole for 67 days, hoping to stay at least 115 days.

A hospital spokesman said Woodridge, 49, was "resting very well."

Winds gusting up to 40 miles an hour snapped the pole in two Sunday, causing Woodridge to fall to the pavement beside his restaurant. His foot was broken in the accident.

Onassis

Greek shipowner Aristotle Onassis offered a reward of $830,000 Tuesday for proof that the light plane crash that killed his only son, Alexander, two years ago was caused by sabotage.

Front-page advertisements in Athens newspapers said, "Because foreign and Greek experts say sabotage rather than negligence in the airplane crash of Jan. 22, 1973, that caused the death of Alexander Onassis and the injury of other persons as well as the loss of the aircraft, anyone who has proof or evidence showing that the accident was premeditated should come forward to be rewarded with the sum of 15 million drachmas ($500,000) in Greek or foreign currency."

"In addition, the sum of 10 million drachmas ($330,000) will be given to charity on the recommendation of the successful applicant."

The advertisement said the reward would be paid only if the information resulted in conviction of the alleged culprits.

Alexander, 24, was fatally injured when his light aircraft crashed during takeoff at Athens airport.

Miss Jackie Tonawanda filed a complaint Tuesday charging New York State with sex discrimination for refusing to grant her a professional boxing license.

In the complaint to the State Human Rights Commission, Miss Tonawanda, 28, said the State Athletic Commission's refusal to act on her application, filed Oct. 8, had violated her constitutional rights.

Miss Tonawanda, 5-foot-9 and 175 pounds, wearing a blue pants suit and white turtleneck sweater, said, "I've been fighting for 12 years, only against women."

SAIGON—The Vietnamese Communists said Tuesday they would not help search for missing Americans in Indochina until the United States gets completely out of South Vietnam and aids in rebuilding North Vietnam. The North Vietnamese foreign ministry demanded that the Paris peace agreement of two years ago be carried out. The agreement includes the U.S. promise to "help heal the wounds of war" in both North and South Vietnam. The Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government, in a separate Christmas Eve message, said all American military aid to Saigon must be ended and South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu overthrown before there can be any cooperation. About 8,350 Americans work in Saigon for the U.S. government and government contractors, helping coordinate the expenditure of about $1.15 billion in annual aid to Saigon, including $700 million in military aid. The U.S. administration has never asked Congress for funds for North Vietnam. The Communist notes were in reply to a U.S. demand last week for detailed information on 87 American servicemen whose fate, the embassy maintained, is known to the Communists.

Cyclone destruction

SYDNEY—Cyclone Tracy ripped through the northern Australia port of Darwin early today, tearing off roofs, overturning cars and littering the streets with rubble. At least seven persons died in the storm that battered the town of 35,000 persons with winds up to 125 miles an hour, according to an Australian Broadcasting Commission reporter who compared Darwin to a "blitzed city." The roof of the city's only hospital was blown off and the police station was severely damaged, the report said.

Santa guarded in Belfast

BELFAST—Santa Claus came to troubled Ulster Tuesday in an armored car. With the Irish Republican Army truce holding firm in its second day, a British army armored car followed by other security vehicles pulled up in the mainly Protestant Sandy Row district, which was packed like the rest of Belfast with shopping crowds. Out stepped Santa Claus, an army trooper in a very unimilitary red-and-white uniform. For more than an hour, while other soldiers armed with automatic rifles stood guard, the army's Santa passed out candy and small gifts to surprised Sandy Row children.

Cyclone smacks Australia

DARWIN, Australia—Cyclone Tracy, packing winds up to 90 miles an hour, smashed through this far northern city early Christmas Day causing widespread property damage and cutting communications. The communications loss prevented authorities from determining the full extent of damage and if there were any casualties.

White Christmas for some DENVER—About a quarter of the nation should have a white Christmas. Snow fell Tuesday over the central Rockies and was scattered along the Upper Plains and the Great Lakes with another area in western Missouri and eastern Kansas. The ground was covered with a white blanket from the Rockies across Kansas and in New York and northern New England. A cold front stretched Tuesday from the mid-Atlantic Coast to Texas, which separated the cold air in the North from balmy temperatures along much of the Gulf Coast. Temperatures varied from near zero in the Rockies, low teens in the Plains and to the upper 70s and low 80s along the Gulf Coast. Some heavy rains fell over sections of the South. Selma, Ala., reported more than 4 inches in a 12-hour period.

Clean air control delay

WASHINGTON—The start of state controls over the construction of shopping centers, highways and other indirect sources of air pollution was postponed for six months on Tuesday by Environmental Protection Administrator Russell Train. Train suspended the federal regulations, originally scheduled to take effect next Jan. 1, until June 30, 1975, to give Congress a chance to discuss the controversial issue.

Sunny weather due today

Chill winds bring snow to foothills

A typically sunny Southern California Christmas with clear skies, light, crisp breezes and temperatures slightly higher than earlier this week was predicted for today, a spokesman for the National Weather Service said Tuesday.

The chilly winds exceeding 30 mph, which whipped through coastal areas and dropped temperatures to 32 degrees early Tuesday had subsided by afternoon, pushing the mercury up to an unseasonably low 58 degrees.

Today's high was expected to be 63 degrees — slightly lower than the 65 degree average for Christmas days in the Southland. A low of 35 degrees was expected, forecasters said.

The National Weather Service also predicted a warming trend beginning today as a new front moves in and winds decrease.

The gusty northerly winds which chilled Long Beach and other coastal areas brought snow flurries to higher elevations. At Fawnskin on Big Bear Lake, a trace of snow fell, but winds up to 50 mph swept much of it away.

Some snow flurries fell in the northern outskirts of San Bernardino early Monday at the 3,000-foot level.

A forecaster for the National Weather Service said there was a chance that some snow would remain on the ground at higher elevations through Christmas.

Elsewhere, temperatures are expected to fall to the mid-20s in many Southern California citrus growing areas. Early morning temperatures Tuesday dropped below freezing in Hemet and parts of the San Joaquin Valley, but little damage to citrus crops was reported.

A spokesman for citrus growers, however, said an extended period of freezing could be disastrous for crops.

Two years ago a killer freeze near Clovis, northeast of Fresno, and other parts of the San Joaquin Valley, caused damage estimated at $41 million.

Unusually dry weather for this time of the year also was reported by forecasters. Relative humidity ranged from 34 per cent to 13 per cent in the Los Angeles basin, forecasters said.

Elderly woman dies when hit by police car

An elderly Long Beach woman was struck and killed by a police car Wednesday afternoon when she apparently darted across Long Beach Boulevard at Home Street.

Police said Marie Woods, who lived nearby in a senior citizens housing project at 225 E. Del Amo Blvd., was dead on arrival at Dominguez Valley Hospital at about 4 p.m.

Witnesses told Officer Jon Stewart III that the victim, believed to be in her 70s, stepped off the curb into the crosswalk, walking westbound across Long Beach Boulevard. The woman stopped for an instant and then was continuing swiftly across the street when she stepped in front of a police car driven by Officer John Finn, witnesses said.

Finn said he braked when he saw the woman, but could not avoid hitting her. He had been driving northbound on Long Beach Boulevard.

Finn's car spun around after he struck the woman but, despite heavy traffic, did not hit any other vehicles.

Finn was not cited or held, police said.

WOMAN DIES

An 89-year-old Walnut Park woman died at her home Tuesday from burns suffered when a blanket wrapped around her caught fire, authorities said.

Firemen said Frances Russell, of 3103 E. Walnut St., was sitting in a chair smoking when the blanket caught fire shortly after 4 p.m.

L.A. check fraud suspects face arraignment on Jan. 7

United Press International

Two men were ordered held Tuesday for Los Angeles Superior Court trial in a plot to defraud the city of millions of dollars in a bogus check scheme.

Morton B. Freeman, 47, Palos Verdes, and Bernard R. Howard, 52, New York, must appear Jan. 7 in Superior Court for arraignment on charges of conspiracy, forgery, attempted grand theft and receiving stolen property.

Municipal Court Judge Warren H. Deering made the ruling in the case in the second day of a preliminary hearing. He also declined to reduce bail.

Freeman was held in lieu of $100,000 bond, and Howard in lieu of $250,000. The major witness against the pair was Michael Raymond, an ex-convict who was approached by Howard in New York last month to help "launder" three checks totaling about $2.5 million drawn on the Los Angeles city treasury.

Raymond reported the scheme to the U.S. Senate Permanent Investigating Committee and was put in contact with Los Angeles authorities.

By pre-arrangement with Raymond, the two defendants allegedly went to a Beverly Hills Hotel Dec. 7 to pick up the loot in cash and were arrested.

Raymond testified that the plot was made possible by theft of checks from the city treasury by a trusted employee with 16 or 17 years' service.

The "inside" man has not been identified and authorities would say only that about 30 persons had access to the checks.

A fourth check, written for $902,125, was accepted by a New York bank and transferred to European banks where most of it was withdrawn by a known international swindler.

When this check was put into the city computer for validation it was kicked out automatically because of erroneous data on it.

Raymond, as the informant in the case, was given a $45,000 fee by the city for his help in the apprehension of Howard and Freeman.

Six arson counts set

A 49-year-old transient suspected of setting 50 fires in the downtown Los Angeles during a three-week period was charged Tuesday with six counts of arson.

Named in the district attorney's complaint was John Schram, who was arrested Sunday following questioning by arson investigators.

Police had sought a total of 34 counts against Schram but the complaint contained only six counts. Investigators said another 16 fires may have been started by Schram.

Police on RTD buses arrest 11

Eleven persons were taken into custody on various Rapid Transit District buses Monday night after 18 disguised Newton Street Division officers rode the buses on the latest operation aimed at reducing violence on the area's transit system, police said.

Some of the undercover officers were dressed as drunks or women. They rode three to a bus and switched lines throughout the hour Monday night.

A policeman disguised as a drunk nabbed a strongarm robbery suspect.

Sgt. Genn Thrall said four of those arrested were juveniles—three of whom were females.

He said they were released to their parents after being booked on suspicion of disturbing the peace.

The seven adults were men, investigators said. They said one was taken into custody as a probable mental case.

Three were booked on suspicion of using marijuana, one for drinking in public, one for disturbing the peace and one for attempted strongarm robbery.

Last Nov. 10, after the fatal shooting of a 23-year-old Mexican national during an argument with juveniles aboard a bus, 15 undercover officers spent the day riding throughout the South-Central Los Angeles area and arrested 35 persons.

In that roundup, three juveniles were released to their parents while the rest of those arrested were charged on counts ranging from possession of firearms to disturbing the peace and drug violations.

Police at that time said two juvenile girls arrested were carrying five loaded handguns.

ACTION LINE is your service solving your problems, getting your answers, cutting red tape and standing up for your rights. To get action, write ACTION LINE, Box 230, Long Beach, Calif. 90844, or dial 432-3451 between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. Monday through Friday. No help

I have a relative who is paranoid - he thinks he is president of the United States. Although he has worked and supported himself most of his life, he now is mentally incapable of holding a job. Due to the laws of this state, there is no way to get help for him unless he commits himself for treatment. And to get any sort of disability compensation, he would have to go to a doctor to prove himself mentally sick. These things he will not even consider doing. I read some of your Action Line items and they seem so petty. I hope you will consider this problem which we feel is very important. I hate to see a life completely wasted when we know he can be helped as he was once in the past. M.W., Paramount.

We have attempted to assist in similar problems in the past but have found no answer. Your criticism that Action-Line sometime ignores serious problems to address its efforts to more frivolous matters has been made by readers before. Our explanation is that, in our experience, there simply are more problems in the world we live in than there are solutions. We regret that there are aggravated injustices brought to our attention for which we can supply no help, but there are, and we can not walk on the water.

Hot town in old time

My husband claims it has never reached 115 degrees here. I say it has. We have a $10 bet on this, so if you can prove I am right I would greatly appreciate it. Mrs. R.L.E., Lakewood.

You lose. The hottest temperature ever recorded for this area was 111 degrees, according to Elton Beals of the National Weather Service in Los Angeles. That record-breaking high was recorded in Long Beach Airport Oct. 16, 1938, then again on Oct. 15, 1961, according to records kept since 1911. The coldest temperature recorded here, said Beals, was in January 1963 when the mercury dipped to 23 degrees. The most rain in a 24 hour period was 6.86 inches in January 1956, a figure double the 3.43 inches dumped on Long Beach earlier this month.

Parkway tree

In November I asked the Orange County Road Department to remove a tree in front of my house because it has raised the sidewalk about three inches making it dangerous for children riding bicycles and roller skates and for people walking at night. Also, a substance from the tree is falling on my car and damaging the paint. I have not even received an answer from them. Could Action Line please help? E.M., Los Alamitos.

It is Orange County policy that a tree affecting the condition of the sidewalk is the responsibility of the property owner and it is up to him to remove it, according to Murray Storm, assistant road commissioner. He noted that the county would remove a tree if it were affecting the street or curb. Storm also said the county is not responsible for paint damage to your car which may be caused by the tree. If you wish to remove the tree yourself, you should obtain a permit from the Orange County Road Department, 409 Civic Center Drive, Room 219, Santa Ana, Calif. 92701. If you want to plant another tree you would need a permit from the road department also. You must choose from a list of approved trees.

Surgical procedure

I'm 68 years old with no high blood pressure or heart trouble. Eight months ago my left eye's retina tore slightly at the edges. A doctor performed what is called cryogenic repair on it and 13 days later a blood clot struck my retina circulatory system. I lost my sight in that eye. I think subjecting the retina to such sudden stress is dangerous, especially to the aged. Can Action Line find out the true value of this surgical procedure? H.E.M., Long Beach.

Cryogenic eye repair has a success rate of about 75 per cent, termed "pretty good" by an eye surgeon at UCLA's Medical School. He said it is very unusual for your blood clot was a result of the cryogenic repair. The surgical procedure is a relatively common method which has been used since 1961 to repair torn retinas the innermost layer of the eye. An instrument is inserted into the eye and liquid gas is applied at -80 degrees Fahrenheit to produce scarring. The scar tissue surrounds the tear and results in its reattachment to the retina.

Late appeal denied to mass murderer

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A state appellate court has denied a motion by Willie Luther Steelman — convicted of mass murder — to file a late appeal for nine killings.

The 3rd District Court of Appeal ruled that Steelman had received adequate notice of the Sept. 6 deadline for his appeal and had no justification for late filing.

Steelman, now held in Arizona awaiting trial on five other murder charges, was convicted last July 8 of the murder of Victor, Calif., grocer Walter Parkin and eight others. He was sentenced to life in prison, as was his alleged partner, Douglas P. Gretzler.

In his petition for late filing, Steelman said he

Watergate jurors get time to shop, plan Yule with kin

By MIKE SHANAHAN

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Watergate cover-up trial jurors were permitted to make last-minute gift purchases Tuesday before spending Christmas with their families.

A special Christmas dinner, with bubbling fountain spouting champagne and cold duck, was planned for the holiday in a banquet room of the Sheraton-Park Hotel.

More than 40 family members of the jurors have been invited to the banquet, which will be closely watched by 17 U.S. marshals to halt any conversations about the trial. The marshals also accompanied jurors on shopping errands.

Four of the five defendants — John N. Mitchell, H. R. Haldeman, Robert C. Mardian and Kenneth W. Parkinson — indicated plans to spend Christmas with their families in Washington. John D. Ehrlichman is with his family in Seattle.

Only Parkinson now claims Washington as his home.

The jury recently moved from the Midtown Hotel, about 10 blocks from the courthouse, to the Sheraton-Park Hotel, a more expensive temporary residence located in the midst of a residential section of Northwest Washington.

An official with the U.S. marshal's office said the move was intended to make the jurors as comfortable as possible as they begin final deliberations.

The menu for the Christmas Day dinner includes shrimp cocktail, young Vermont roast turkey, celery dressing, cranberry sauce, and a choice of mince pie, pumpkin pie, ice cream pie or cheesecake for dessert.

Although the jurors are now living in the same hotel where they were to entertain their families, the visits will be confined to the hotel banquet.

U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica suggested three weeks ago that the jury work on Saturdays to make a pre-Christmas verdict possible.

But in a letter, the jury replied unanimously that they felt the careful and deliberate presentation of the case to be more important than spending the holiday at home.

Sirica also suggested that he hold court Tuesday, but the jurors responded they would rather have the day off, and the judge obliged.

"I don't think we ought to force these jurors to sit," Sirica said Monday. "Maybe some of them have some last minute shopping."

The jury will hear final defense closing arguments Thursday and Friday. They are expected to begin final deliberations of the guilt or innocence of the defendants by week's end.

"I suspect the members of the jury will always remember this Christmas," Sirica told the panel before dismissing them for the holiday break. "It's probably the first and last time you'll ever be sequestered over Christmas."

Meat packers fined in 'bait, switch' methods

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI)—A Superior Court judge Tuesday ordered the owners of five Washington meat companies to halt unfair and deceptive business practices, and assessed $18,500 in fines and attorney's fees.

Judge William Williams suspended another $12,000 in fines on condition the owners do not continue such practices, which included bait and switch tactics.

Agreeing to the order were Robert Brueggemeier and Maurice A. Wolfe, both of Grand Prairie, Tex., and attorneys for the state attorney general's office, which originally filed a complaint against the firms.

In addition to the fines, the owners agreed to contact some 1,400 customers and inform them of the court agreement and pay back those who may have been victimized.

Nixon getting thousands of cards, loads of gifts

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon got more than 7,000 Christmas cards on Monday alone and gift packages have been coming in at the rate of six to 10 a day for several weeks, the San Clemente Post Office disclosed Tuesday.

An aide said the former Chief Executive would spend a "quiet" family Christmas with his wife, his two daughters and their husbands at the ocean villa where he is recovering from surgery.

Chuck Connors, the Western movie and television actor, arrived in San Clemente Tuesday and it was believed he might pay a Christmas call. Connors struck up a friendship with the former president and was introduced by Nixon to Leonid Brezhnev when the Soviet leader visited San Clemente two years ago.

The Western Union office said Nixon received 26 telegrams Monday and that 25 more had arrived before noon Tuesday.

Manager Greg Joannidi said most of the telegrams conveyed holiday greetings and wishes for Nixon's speedy recovery but that a few complained about the state of the economy.

One of the telegrams was from evangelist Billy Graham. A number of the letters were from overseas.

Four local florist shops said that a number of plants and flowers had been sent to the Nixon family for Christmas but declined to identify the senders.

Dr. John C. Lungren, Nixon's personal physician, said the former president's recovery was following the "projected course" and that he was showing gradual improvement which permits periods of walking adding up to about two miles a day.

Pat Nixon decorated a large tree during the weekend with ornaments the family has had since their daughters were small girls and also placed wreaths around the house, an aide disclosed. Tricia and Edward Cox planned to stay at San Clemente over the weekend while Julie and David Eisenhower were expected to remain through New Year's Day.

The former Western White House offices at the adjoining Coast Guard complex were deserted. Presidential aide Ron Ziegler was spending Christmas in Washington, as was military aide Col. Jack Brennan.

Paul Presley, a friend of Nixon whose property is next to that of the former President, said he got a letter from Nixon Tuesday with a handwritten note at the bottom saying, "let's get together over the holidays."

"I don't know what he means by that," Presley said.

Presley said he had not seen Nixon since he returned from the hospital last month and that so far as he knew, the Nixons had not entertained anyone else.

Lost in prayer

Little girl is caught in midst of Chicago-area Muslims bowing in prayer Monday in McCormick Place. The Muslims met to observe the holy day Eid-Ul-Adaha, which commemorates the sacrifices of the Prophet Abraham.

Storm brews over getting boss' coffee

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — The storm still brews over whether or not a secretary should get coffee for her boss.

According to a nationwide survey by Kelly Girl Office Services, some traditional ideas about the secretary-boss relationship have changed, while others have remained the same.

Of 1,000 secretaries who answered the question, "Do you mind getting coffee for your boss?" 81 per cent said they did not, 14 per cent said they did and 3.5 per cent were undecided, according to the survey.

But there were many qualifying statements from women in favor of and against getting coffee.

"No, I don't mind getting coffee. My training was to wait on the boss—whatever it was. Glad to see the young change some of this," said a California executive secretary, about 50.

"Yes, I do mind, but I'll qualify that by saying that I will bring him a cup — if he is willing to bring me one also in turn," a Texas secretary said.

The most polarized opinions represented the traditional attitude of "anything the boss wants" and "Does the boss fetch coffee for his boss?" the survey indicated.

A New Jersey secretary wrote: "One of the secretary's functions is to make the executive's job a little easier and it gives me a chance to do something special for someone."

But opposite feelings were expressed by another employee. "It is humiliating and degrading. It is being treated like a maid or a personal servant instead of a co-worker. It also is sexist. I don't think men employees would be expected to wait on their bosses in this way."

partment for operations overseas and the FBI, which has the domestic mission of keeping track of Soviet-bloc spies.

"We have the best relations with the Federal Bureau of Investigation," he said.

Angleton said he was quitting at age 57, rather than staying on to retirement age. "I have to leave now," he said. "My usefulness has ended. I do not know what I will do."

Meanwhile, Rep. Lucien N. Nedzi, chairman of the intelligence subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee, said in a television interview Tuesday: "There's been an overstepping of bounds" by the CIA. "You might call it illegalities in terms of exceeding their charter," Nedzi, D-Mich., said.

Helms' denial was reported by Robert Anderson, State Department spokesman, as controversy continued to grow over the spying allegations.

Anderson said Helms, who will arrive in Washington in about a week on a prearranged home leave, had telegraphed his denial in response to Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's request for a report.

Anderson, quoting from the telegram, said Helms had "categorically denied that under his stewardship the CIA conducted illegal domestic operations against antiwar activists or dissidents, or that any unit to do such was created under him as director."

Anderson also announced that Kissinger expected to receive a report on the alleged domestic spying from William E. Colby, the current CIA director, and would forward it to President Ford, who is on vacation at Vail, Colo.

Word of Angleton's resignation became known late Monday. Well-informed sources told the Times that Colby had met

French leader breakfasts with 4 garbagemen

PARIS (NYTS) — Early Tuesday, the four men who collect garbage on Avenue Marigny next to the Elysee Palace were stopped by a uniformed guard, only to be led into the palace to join President Valery Giscard d'Estaing for a breakfast of cafe au lait, croissants and toast.

Besides the French truckdriver, the team included two emigres from Mali and one from Senegal.

The conversation was about the garbage problem and about Africa — of which the President said he was "fond."

After 10 minutes everybody went back to work, the garbage collectors each carrying a presidential gift of a bottle of champagne and a turkey.

FBI gets OK to 'watch' Socialist gathering

NEW YORK (AP) — The FBI got permission Tuesday to keep an eye on the Young Socialist Alliance convention, which opens in St. Louis Dec. 28.

The U.S. Court of Appeals overruled a week-old ban on surveillance or "confidential informant" monitoring of the sessions, saying the FBI only planned to do what it normally does.

"The FBI has a right, indeed a duty, to keep itself informed with respect to the possible commission of crimes," the appeals court said. "It is not obliged to wear blinders until it may be too late for prevention."

Attorneys for the Young Socialist group said they would appeal Tuesday's decision to the U.S. Supreme Court before the convention opens.

The appeals court said the ban, issued Dec. 16 by U.S. District Judge Thomas P. Griesa, was "an abuse of discretion." But the court ordered the FBI to not send attendance lists to the Civil Service Commission, which in the past had used such rosters to question government workers or jobseekers.

Herbert Jordan, an alliance attorney, said it feared the FBI would compile lists of those attending that might jeopardize their chances of future employment.

He argued that the group was entitled to bar "hostile government agents or FBI agents masquerading as socialists."

In his earlier decision, Griesa held that FBI activity at the convention would "inhibit the right of association." He found that the U.S. government had not proved "violent revolutionary activity or any other illegal activity."

Asst. U.S. Atty. Stephen J. Glassman told the appeals bench that Griesa's findings "were unsupported and contradicted." He argued that the FBI did not have "to wait for actual violence before investigating."

Jordan said that the alliance "opposes and denounces the use of terrorism and violence" and that the FBI had never found evidence of any, although agents had attended all previous conventions.

Glassman claimed that an active minority in the alliance favored "violence or other illegal activity including guerrilla tactics."

Griesa's injunction barred the FBI from "attending, surveilling, listening to, watching or otherwise monitoring" the convention.

WIFE, GINNY CONGRATULATES WYMAN
But two-vote victory is still disputed —UPI

2-vote victor Wyman wants a new election

CONCORD, N.H. — Now it's official—

After 49 days of ballot recounting, political squabbles and courtroom pyrotechnics, the New Hampshire Ballot Law Commission Tuesday declared Republican Louis C. Wyman the winner of a contested U.S. Senate seat here by two votes.

The decision wiped out the 10-vote margin of victory held by Democrat John A. Durkin after a recount by the secretary of state's office last Nov. 27.

Wyman in his "victory" statement said there was still no clear mandate, recommending "the fairest way to have a clear answer is a runoff election."

Durkin said he and his lawyers were preparing a petition contesting Tuesday's ruling to the Senate and added that he, too, might be amenable to a new election.

James H. Duffy, majority counsel to the subcommittee on privileges and elections of the Senate Rules Committee, which has apparent jurisdiction, said he expected to recommend that the subcommittee hold public hearings before deciding whom to seat as the new junior senator from New Hampshire.

WHILE MOST elections turn out a winner, the voting here last Nov. 5 was only the beginning of a long, running political battle. The vote kicked back and forth by hundreds of ballots and less throughout the night as first Wyman, currently a U. S. representative, and then Durkin, a former state insurance commissioner, ran ahead.

The final election-night tally showed Wyman winning the election by 452 votes.

Durkin demanded a recount from Secretary of State Robert L. Stark.

The recount found that Democrat Durkin had won by 10 votes. When Durkin heard the news on his car radio en route to the capital here, he was so excited he ran into the car ahead of him.

WYMAN THEN ASKED the Ballot Law Commission for another recount, with a careful examination of contested votes.

The results of the recount announced Tuesday were 110,926 votes for Wyman and 110,924 for Durkin. It was a 12-vote gain for the Republican and no change for the Democrat.

Ronald L. Snow, chairman of the commission, said the group had used "magnifying glasses, lights, and considerable amount of eyesight" in going over the ballots and that its guiding principle was to reflect the intent of the voter.

Snow noted that, although the rules called for a voter to mark an "X" in a box, the commission had seen literally hundreds of variations, including checkmarks, lines, shading out the whole box and marks on either side.

ONE BALLOT HAD the word "ereoks" written in the box for a straight-ticket Republican vote. The commission ruled it a "no" vote and discarded the ballot. Another had all the Republican boxes, including that for the Senate race, marked, but had Wyman's name crossed out. The question was which came first, the "X" or the line. The commission finally ruled in favor of Wyman.

Duffy, the subcommittee counsel, said that among the options the Senate would have were accepting Wyman's later certificate of election, going over the challenged ballots or declaring the seat vacant, in which case the state would have to fill it, either by gubernatorial appointment or a special election. The subcommittee members are Sens. Claiborne Pell, D.-R.I., the chairman; Robert Byrd, D.-W.Va., and Robert Griffin, R.-Mich.

The only issue is who was voted for the most," Duffy said in a telephone interview. "But it's so divided that it's almost impossible to tell."

LAWYER LIVES IN TRAILER

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — When Vermont's lone congressman, U.S. Rep-elect James Jeffords, goes to Washington next month, he will take up residence in modest and mobile quarters: his 22-foot motor home. Jeffords, a Republican, said campaign and personal debts amounting to $44,000 will necessitate austere living for the early part of his two-year term in the House.

The 36-year-old attorney said, "I am going to live in the trailer because I've got to cut down on expenses. There's no question about that."

He plans to park his camper in Greenbelt, Md., and take a bus to the Capitol. He estimates that parking costs and utilities for the home will be about $30 a month.

sons. Some 3 million other unemployed are not covered by the insurance. Pennsylvania had the greatest weekly increase as 29,000 persons, many of them laid off by the apparel industry, joined the jobless benefit rolls in that state.

Next was New York with 22,200, followed by New Jersey with 17,200; California rolls increased by 16,100; South Carolina by 9,700 and Ohio by 9,500.

The rise in unemployed in New York stemmed from cutbacks in the transportation equipment industry. In New Jersey, workers from the construction, trade, chemicals and apparel industries pushed up the total.

California reported substantial layoffs by food processing, transportation equipment and lumber firms, while textile workers lost the greatest number of jobs in South Carolina. Ohio's problems stemmed primarily from cutbacks in the automobile, metals and construction industries.

In other developments:

— Energy chief Frank Zarb said a stiff gasoline tax increase to force energy conservation is unlikely unless there is another Arab oil embargo. He said President Ford should not treat it "with any degree of favor."

— Following U.S. Steel's 20 per cent roll-back in its price increase, attention focused on Bethlehem Steel Corp., the second largest behind U.S. Steel, and Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp., both of which raised prices to match the original U.S. Steel hike. Bethlehem said it would not comment until after Christmas.

— Gold held at near record levels in Christmas eve trading on world markets in anticipation of an American rush to buy the precious metal when the ban on U.S. ownership of bullion is lifted Tuesday. Gold closed 50 cents lower than Monday in London at $192.50 ounce and at $192.75 in Zurich. The dollar fell in Paris, Zurich and Brussels.

— Drivers for 150 coal-hauling truck lines in western Pennsylvania scheduled a vote on whether to remain on the job during a 60 day "cooling off" period while contract negotiations continued. Mines were closed Tuesday in a two-day holiday break.

There were a few bright spots this holiday season.

Ford Motor Co. said it is extending credit terms up to 42 to 48 months in an effort to improve domestic sales.

The National Weather Service forecast a 60 per cent chance that winter temperatures will be above normal on the East and West coasts, good news for people concerned about supplies of heating fuel.

Acting Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., of the House Ways and Means Committee said the panel's first goal for 1975 will be to enacting a tax cut.

In New York, there was a last minute jam of shoppers to gladden the hearts of Manhattan merchants; even Beluga caviar, at $45 a pound, was selling out at one store. "You'd never know this was a recession," said one shopper who stood in line for an hour at a gourmet food counter.

In Chicago, the Greater North Michigan Avenue Association, representing merchants in the upper part of that broad boulevard, caroled happily that its holiday retail sales volume was the largest in history, with avenue sales from Nov. 1 through Dec. 24 exceeding the corresponding 1973 period by a solid six to 10 per cent.

"There has been a late surge in gift purchases since Dec. 10," reported one official. "It is a happy and somewhat surprising performance in view of our national economic uncertainties."

In thrifty New England, the Maine Turnpike Authority loosened up enough to offer motorists a free cup of coffee between 10 p.m. Christmas Eve and 7 a.m. today.

Sumberg of the University of Tennessee, a scholar of the Crusades, paid no attention to the security and said, "I am making a spiritual visit."

AROUND the world, high prices and worry over rising unemployment dampened the nonreligious aspects of Christmas: gift-buying, food and festivities.

In most of the cities of Europe, all hard-hit by the oil price rise, the decorations were less glittering than in previous years. In the Italian workers' suburbs, where many are without jobs, shopkeepers said few gifts were being bought. Shoppers bought cautiously in Germany and Denmark, selecting practical things.

But in London, the stores said people were spending 15 to 25 per cent more than last year — possibly wanting to buy something before the shrinking British currency loses even more value.

Though Christmas is not an official holiday in Japan, which has only about one million Christians among its 110 million people, Tokyo department stores usually play Christmas songs and decorate the downtown Ginza district with gay lights. This year, the decorations were reduced considerably.

BIG Tokyo hotels usually hold Christmas Eve parties with entertainment, but most canceled them this year because people are expected to stay home to save money. However, the sales of traditional Christmas layer cakes and toys were reported strong.

"Despite the depression, parents still want to give joy to their children," one store official said.

In Chile, 38-year-old Mrs. Elba Torrejon said Christmas for her and her husband and six children will be the same as always: working in the bean fields and eating a dinner of bread and noodles. The Torrejons, who live in a wooden shack, are among the estimated two million very poor in Chile's population of 10 million.

"And there won't be any gifts for the children," she said. "I hope to give them a little bit more to eat and that's all."

IN Canberra, Australia, a man who emigrated from the Ukraine 26 years ago began a holiday fast in an enclosure topped with barbed wire outside the Soviet Embassy to protest imprisonment of intellectuals in the Soviet Union.

260 likely to die on highways

CHICAGO (UPI) — The National Safety Council urged motorists Tuesday to take it easy en route to grandmother's house during the short Christmas holiday.

The council estimates between 200 and 260 persons will die on the nation's highways, some of them sick with rain and snow, during the 30-hour Christmas period stretching from 6 p.m. local time Tuesday to midnight to night.

The council also warned between 11,000 and 14,000 persons were likely to suffer disabling injuries during Christmas driving.

The last time there was a one-day Christmas holiday was in 1968, and 231 persons died in traffic accidents, according to council records. This year's projection takes into account the increased number of motorists since 1968 and also the lower speed limits which have reduced traffic deaths for most of the year.

Last year, Americans celebrated Christmas with a four-day holiday and a total of 480 persons were killed in traffic.

By midnight EST Tuesday, 14 traffic fatalities had been reported, including three deaths in a rush hour accident on ice slicked Interstate 495 in Haverhill, Mass.

Huge Japanese oil spill spreads over 80 miles

New York Times Service

TOKYO — The biggest oil spill in Japan's history continued to spread through the scenic Inland Sea Tuesday, polluting an area more than 80 miles long and 20 miles wide.

Damage to fisheries and beaches from the huge oil slick, which was advancing about half a mile an hour, was already estimated to be more than $20 million.

The spill occurred last Thursday at a refinery of the Mitsubishi Oil Company in Mizushima, midway between the cities of Osaka and Hiroshima.

Company officials have offered no explanation as to what caused the leak, but the local fire department has suggested it may have been caused by "operational error" on the part of refinery employees.

There has also been speculation that the soft, sludge-like land beneath the oil tank gave way. The refinery was built on land reclaimed from the sea.

The Inland Sea, which divides Japan's islands of Honshu, Kyushu and Shikoku, has long been a historic waterway as well as a major center of fishing and a favorite tourist area. In recent years there has been growing protest over pollution of the area by the burgeoning new industries around the shores.

The Maritime Safety Agency ordered out 531 vessels, mostly small fishing boats, to try to contain the slick. But officials of the agency said their efforts had proved unsuccessful.

The giant slick had already moved from Mizushima on the eastern shore of Honshu across the Inland Sea to Shikoku and then out through the Kii Straits toward the Pacific Ocean.

Fishermen say half their seaweed cultivation in the area has already been destroyed. Some oil has also begun to wash ashore at widely scattered beaches. About 11.3 million gallons of oil are believed to have spilled out.

Fog blocks oil-slick cleanup

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Heavy fog and rough seas blocked all attempts to clean up an oil slick of more than 500 barrels coating the Gulf of Mexico off the Louisiana coast, the U.S. Coast Guard said Tuesday night.

Before the fog rolled in, the slick was three miles off the coast and heading west.

"The situation remains the same," a Coast Guard spokesman said.

"Nobody's been able to investigate because of the fog. We'll try and fly a helicopter over it tomorrow, and hopefully that aerial survey will give us more information about the extent of the pollution."

"We've now classified it as a medium as opposed to a minor spill. Five hundred barrels or more makes it a medium," he said. There were no firm estimates on the amount of oil spilled.

Work crews trying to straighten a pipe Sunday broke the seal on a capped oil well damaged last September during Hurricane Carmen.

Workers tried to complete a 4,300-foot relief well at the site, 50 miles southeast of Houma, La., and 11 miles from shore, but officials said it probably would not be finished until the weekend.

Alaska isle feels quake

PALMER, Alaska (AP) — A strong earthquake registering 6.2 on the Richter scale rocked the military outpost of Shemya in the Aleutian Islands late Tuesday, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration reported.

An observatory spokesman said the quake was felt on the island, which has a population of more than 1,000 persons, but added that it was not strong enough to generate a tsunami and no damage was reported.

FORD SKI RUN

ing legislative decisions in the afternoon.

In the morning Ford also accepted the resignation of William D. Eberle as his special representative for trade negotiations and executive director of the Council on International Economic Policy.

As is their tradition on annual holiday visits to this resort village, the Fords had a Christmas Eve dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Ted Kindel, 12-year residents originally from the President's home town of Grand Rapids, Mich. Kindel was the first mayor of Vail.

Joining them for a buffet of ham, roast beef and fresh salmon were Mr. and Mrs. James Brown, friends from Tremonton, Utah.

The services the Fords attended were nondenominational ones at Vail's Interfaith Chapel.

The Fords traditionally exchange Christmas gifts after midnight, but Mrs. Ford announced to her husband Christmas Eve that the presents would not be opened until Wednesday morning.

As the couple entered the Kindel home, Mrs. Ford said in answer to a reporter's question that the family gifts would wait until Christmas morning. The President looked surprised and said, "Oh, we are?"

Mrs. Ford nodded her head "yes" and the President quipped, "You know who's the boss, don't you?"

Ford's face appeared windburned from his long skiing day as he and Mrs. Ford arrived for dinner in 5-below-zero weather.

Nessen announced Ford will hold his first major policy conference here Friday with members of the Energy Resources Council. Flying from Washington for the session will be Chairman Rogers C.B. Morton, secretary of the interior; Executive Director Frank Zarb, federal energy administrator; Treasury Secretary William E. Simon; Chairman Alan Greenspan of the Council of Economic Advisers, and presidential aide I. William Seidman.

It will be Ford's third energy policy session this month.

"I wouldn't expect that we'll have any final decisions made," said Nessen.

Ford wore a different ski outfit for the third straight day as he took to the slopes in subzero weather. Acknowledging he was "a little stiff this morning," he said the cold did not bother him because "you work hard enough to not mind."

But even before setting out on his first run, Ford was a bit breathless, presumably from the exertion of putting on his skis in the high altitude.

New snow started falling as Ford made his run down the mountain.

Along the way, a spectator told the President: "We're really proud to have you here in Vail."

To which Ford replied: "You make me justice of the peace and I'll quit being President."

If warning ignored Smog-law violator may get warrant

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The California Highway Patrol clarified its position Tuesday on enforcement of a new antismog law, saying Southern California violators who ignore written warnings may be called into court.

The CHP said Monday that drivers in the six-county South Coast Air Basin who fail to install devices against nitrogen oxide pollution on older cars will continue to get warnings instead of tickets until the Legislature decides the issue.

But patrol spokesman Milton Kent said Tuesday that warrants will be sent to motorists who don't respond to the warning or to a reminder mailed after about a month.

"We started issuing warnings Dec. 1, and some people could be getting warrants by mid-January," he said.

Further treatment of violators is up to local district attorneys and judges, Kent said.

A new state law requires installation of the controversial antismog devices on 1966 to 70 cars in Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Riverside, Ventura, Orange and Santa Barbara counties.

A bill pending in the Legislature would remove the requirement.

Judge's ruling orders welfare to illegal aliens

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A judge ruled Tuesday that aliens in California can receive welfare aid without proving they are in the country legally.

He said aliens otherwise eligible for welfare can receive it unless they are under deportation order.

The ruling, if it stands, could cost the state and county governments millions of dollars each year. A state welfare spokesman said the decision will be appealed.

"It seems that we must aid illegal aliens," said Jerold Prod, deputy director of the state Department of Benefit Payments.

He said the department may seek to delay the effect of the order.

Superior Court Judge Irving Perluss ruled in favor of a class-action suit brought by several Mexican citizens living in the San Diego area who had been denied welfare benefits by the state.

The law, as interpreted by state welfare director David B. Swoap, requires non-U.S. citizens applying for aid to declare they are in the country legally.

Their names are forwarded to federal immigration officials, who look for a record of legal entry. If none is found, aid can be cut off.

Perluss said the policy violates another section of state law allowing welfare payments to aliens who certify they are not under deportation order, or are married to someone who is not under deportation order.

"Under federal law, it is not only aliens lawfully admitted to this country who may be entitled to aid," the judge wrote.

"There also may be included those aliens presently residing in this country under color of law."

He issued an injunction against further use of the current welfare application form for aliens.

San Diego Legal Aid attorneys who filed the suit said they would seek retroactive payments for persons illegally denied aid.

Prod said it is uncertain how many persons the ruling would affect. Even under current procedures, many illegal immigrants receive welfare, he said.

"The question is, will the change in the law encourage more applications from illegal aliens?" Prod said.

I killed, I captured in S.F. bank holdup

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — One suspect was killed and another captured Tuesday when three men wearing ski masks tried to flee a Bank of America branch with more than $10,000.

Two robbers, one of them holding a sawed-off shotgun, entered the bank at Fillmore and Clay streets just before closing and forced the employees to lie on the floor. They then took three bags of money and attempted to escape in an automobile driven by a third partner, according to police.

A teller who was an off-duty police officer chased the men outside and ordered them to halt. Shots were fired, and the driver of the vehicle was fatally wounded. He was not immediately identified.

Andre Bell, 22, San Francisco, was arrested, and the third suspect escaped.

Police said all the stolen money was recovered.

Chinese list 8 crimes committed by Soviets

TOKYO (AP) — China's Hsinhua news agency listed these "eight crimes committed by the Soviet revisionists" in 1974:

- Unilateral dominance of international conferences by the Soviet Union for disruptive purposes.
- Soviet intensification of plots in a race with the U.S. imperialists to gain control of Europe.
- Wrecking the Arab struggle against Israel by utilizing the Jewish ownership issue for its own purposes.
- Fishing in troubled waters by fanning the Cyprus dispute.
- Continuing to create disturbances in South Asia, thus spurring rivalry with the United States for control of the Indian Ocean.
- Continued occupation of Japan's northern territory and imposition of a military threat against Japan.
- Dealing in speculative transactions in the international market to reap exorbitant profits.
- Active espionage in various parts of the world.

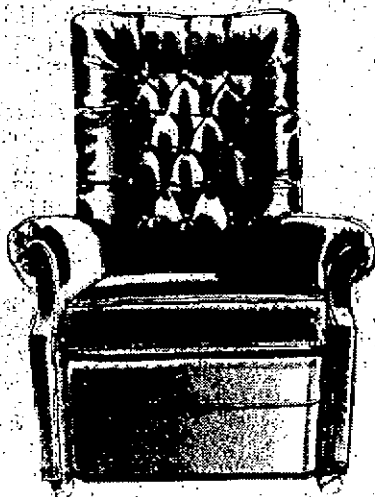

The list was broadcast today by Radio Peking and monitored in Tokyo.

Ford hit on crisis in Boston

U.S. report sees 'turning point in racial history'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. Civil Rights Commission staff report on the Boston school-busing controversy asserts the situation may mark "a critical turning point in American racial history."

It adds that President Ford has "contributed to the problem."

The report, described as "preliminary staff research for decision-making purposes" and dated Nov. 27, criticizes Massachusetts and Boston officials, calling them ineffective and unable to deal with the situation.

Ford's decision not to send federal troops into the city when violence erupted was "wise," the report said, but it suggested that the decision delayed restoring order to the city. It added that Ford should not "jawbone" by summoning "key actors to Washington to reinforce his commitment."

"MORE DRAMATIC and thus more effective would be a presidential visit to Boston" to meet the officials involved, it added.

The court-ordered desegregation plan, which the commission staff strongly endorsed and which prompted the racial disorders, "is being imposed without any effective planning or preparation of students, teachers, administrators, parents or the community for peaceful integration," it said.

"There is not now, nor has there been, any effective, strong, consistently pro-integration leadership," concludes the internal document, a copy of which was obtained by the Associated Press.

A commission spokesman said the commissioners have been presented with the 54-page report but have taken no action on it.

John Kerrigan, chairman of the Boston School Committee, said, "I think what's ruined this country is civil rights commissions. They ignore completely the rights of parents who are concerned about the safety of their children, and concentrate only on desegregating the core cities of this country."

Kerrigan has been a frequent and outspoken critic of busing, as has Boston City Councilor Louise Day Hicks. She said, "It is obvious to me that the compilers of this report spent far too little time analyzing the facts of Boston's unique situation, and as a consequence the report indicates a lack of depth and perception."

Much of the document is background to the controversy in the city it describes as one where "ethnicity has great tenacity," where blacks are poorly organized and whites are "well-organized... towards destructive or anti-social ends."

"THE BOSTON controversy has exploded the thin veneer of civilization so prominently claimed for this 'liberal' city and has laid bare the double standard which exists in desegregation policy," the report's unidentified authors wrote.

The paper warns that the "potential for street violence must not be underestimated."

In a section on "implications for future action," it says all government officials involved and the citizens and businesses of Boston "must invest significant time, human resources and money in remedial actions."

The objectives of those actions, the report continued, must be to restore peace and respect for law and order and to devise a long-term plan "to remedy weaknesses in the current desegregation plan, in public school administration, in teacher training and discipline and in school curriculum."

Election finance law due

Measure will be
'paper tiger' until enforcers named

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new federal campaign-finance law goes into effect Jan. 1, but the commission provided for its enforcement is just "a paper tiger" so far.

Although the legislation was passed in the first part of October, none of the places on the independent six-member commission had been filled when Congress adjourned last week.

"Congress and the White House have failed to implement the key item in the new legislation — the appointment and confirmation of the new enforcement agency," the Center for Public Financing of Elections protested in a statement.

Some of those who played a key role in passage of the legislation have speculated that some of the places have been held open for Congress members defeated in November's election.

A MEMBER of Congress is not eligible for appointment to a position created during his term until after his term has expired.

The law limits campaign contributions and expenditures and provides for public financing of presidential, but not Senate and House, races.

In its enforcement the commission is responsible for receiving campaign reports, issuing rules and regulations, and conducting audits and investigations.

It is empowered to subpoena witnesses and documents and to bring civil proceedings to prevent violations. It would refer criminal cases to the Justice Department for prosecution.

Two of its members are to be appointed by the President, two by the speaker of the House, and two by the president pro tempore of the Senate.

THE MEMBERS are to serve full time, with staggered six-year terms, and their appointments are subject to confirmation by both the Senate and the House.

For the Senate selections, Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana has recommended Joseph F. Meglen and Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania has recommended Mrs. Joan D. Aikens.

Meglen is a Billings, Mont., lawyer and long-time friend of Mansfield. Mrs. Aikens is a Swarthmore, Pa., public-relations executive and president of the Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women.

Mansfield and Scott announced their selections for the Senate appointments on Oct. 17, but the Senate Rules Committee held no hearings on them before Congress adjourned.

SEN. HOWARD W. Cannon, D-Nev., the committee chairman, told a reporter he saw no point in holding hearings until President Ford and the speaker make their nominations.

After confirmation the commission will have to draft and promulgate rules and regulations for the operation of the new law.

Cannon said he did not think the delay in getting the enforcement agency set up would handicap operation of the law, but the Center for Public Financing of Elections took a different view.

"Candidates — announced and otherwise — are already in motion," it said. "Money is flowing toward the 1976 election. The new law, already under attack from the right and the left, must be defended in court by the new Federal Elections Commission."

It said no funds have been provided or even requested for the commission.

Marriage

contract options hit

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Colorado University Law School teacher Homer H. Clark Jr. says marriage contracts which contain renewal options are "terribly simple-minded."

The domestic-relations expert said Tuesday that renewal options cannot be enforced and are not recognized by the courts.

"It strikes me as the ultimate in naive, simple-minded thinking about a relationship as complicated as marriage," Clark said.

"As far as I can see, the main effect of that kind of contract is that it gives you something else to fight over," he said. "You could argue whether you're complying with the contract instead of whether the husband should have a night out with the boys."

Clark said the renewal option sometimes was written in a marriage contract when ministers tell couples about to be married they can write their own wedding ceremony.

Blackbirds get Army reprieve

MILAN, Tenn. (AP) — The Army announced Tuesday that it is reconsidering its decision to kill 14 million blackbirds at two bases because of a public outcry against it. The Army's plans had called for dropping a detergent fog from the air that would strip blackbirds of their insulating oils, allowing them to freeze to death.

The Army said in a statement it would take depositions from both sides in the dispute and issue an environmental impact statement by Feb. 3.

Malcolm Ingram, public information officer for Milan, Tenn., Army Ammunition Plant, where the fog was to have been applied, said the decision also applies to Ft. Campbell, Ky., home of the 101st Airborne Division.

The Army and some residents near the two bases contend blackbird roosts in pine forests are a menace because the birds carry disease, strip crops, are messy and create a danger to aviation.

But the Environmental Defense Fund has argued that the Army has not answered all questions on what may result from the war on blackbirds.

The EDF had demanded to know if nonlethal means could not be used to disperse the birds. The EDF said it held the government partially responsible for the problem, since it planted pines that form the natural roosts for blackbirds and starlings.

The EDF also said it was not clear what effect the detergent mist would have on other birds, wildlife, vegetation and streams or what danger to health and scavenger animals might be created by millions of dead birds.

Some local residents believe other ways of dealing with the birds should be found, such as timbering the two bases to deprive the birds of roosts. The National Audubon Society said earlier this week that it believes the Army has made a case for eradicating the birds, although the society said its ranks were divided on the question.

Each of the two bases involved in the blackbird kill program attracts about seven million birds during the winter.

Calley's lifestyle private, without fiance, old ties

By KATHRYN JOHNSON

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — William L. Calley Jr., no longer haunted by the possibility of confinement in the My Lai murders, has begun a new, private lifestyle.

He's moving into a new apartment with no "old memories," seeking a job in which he won't be exploited and no longer dating his longtime girl friend.

The 31-year-old former army lieutenant, in his first real taste of freedom since he was charged in the My Lai massacre more than five years ago, is apparently sinking into the anonymity he desires.

CALLEY WAS convicted in March, 1971, for the murder of 22 South Vietnamese civilians at My Lai in 1968. The conviction was later reversed and appeals are still pending.

He soon will move from his present apartment in the same complex in which he spent nearly three years in house arrest, to a new one off the Ft. Benning post.

"He wants to get away from too many old memories," said Calley's local attorney, Kenneth Henson.

"He's moving very cautiously about a job. He doesn't want to be exploited for promotional purposes," Henson said in an interview.

"He's looking into a business for himself and has been checking into construction work and also is seriously considering furthering his college education."

Calley, a college dropout, will not attempt to get his degree, his lawyer said, "but just take a few courses at Columbus College."

The stubby, rusty-haired Calley has consistently refused to grant interviews until his case, now under appeal by the Army, is over. Even then, says another of his lawyers, J. Houston Gordon, "he's a saleable commodity."

A close friend, who declined to be identified, said Calley and Anne Moore, who was at his side throughout his lengthy court-martial, no longer date.

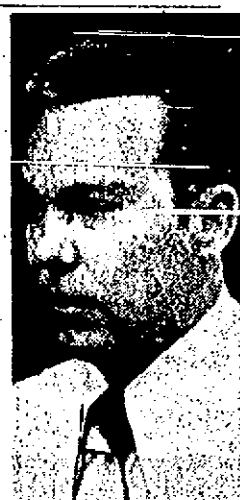

Miss Moore, an attractive green-eyed redhead, took the stand last February in Calley's first civilian appeal to be freed on bail, to describe him as "a very delightful person."

She told the court that she visited him every day, buying his groceries and performing secretarial duties for him.

MISS MOORE, a recreation worker with the Red Cross at Ft. Benning, declined to comment on their apparent breakup. During his years of house confinement, she held his power of attorney.

Friends say Calley, normally a gregarious person who enjoys dining out, is rarely seen in restaurants in Columbus. "We are very defensive about him and hope to help him maintain his privacy," said one.

Calley no longer drives

WILLIAM CALLEY New Apartment

the plush Mercedes which a car dealer is said to have loaned him last February when he was first freed by U.S. District Court Judge J. Robert Elliott. He now drives a small, inexpensive foreign car.

Henson declined to say where Calley gets the money to live or if he's paid his heavy attorney fees and expenses.

His present modest apartment, in which he moved soon after he was freed on bail, is not costly but Calley wears modish, well-cut suits and apparently feels no pressure to take a job.

He's had job offers, Henson says, but they appeared to be the type in which "he would have been exploited."

Calley's attorneys still consider him a lieutenant in the U.S. Army, which dismissed him last spring. His lawyers contend the discharge was a result of his court-martial conviction and should be voided since his conviction was overturned in September.

"The Army has said it no longer seeks confinement of Calley — even if they win their appeal of the reversal of his conviction."

College grads find hard job finding jobs

Chances better for women, minorities, engineer majors

By SETH S. KING
New York Times Service

CHICAGO—If you are graduating from college soon and looking for a job, you may find that with the recession your chances of getting one are less than they were last year but not as bad as had been expected.

If you are majoring in accounting or engineering, especially chemical or petroleum engineering, your chances actually look better than last year, and the starting salaries offered will be 5 to 7 per cent higher.

If you are black or female, or both, your opportunities in many fields are very good. If you are a female engineer or accountant, they are excellent.

A New York Times survey of college placement officers and graduating students in universities in many parts of the country showed that major companies are still sending their recruiters to campuses, although not as many this year as last.

SEVERAL COLLEGE placement officers expressed their surprise at the indications of the number of jobs still available. But they also said they had a greater feeling of uncertainty this year and cautioned that some of their estimates did not reflect the discouraging economic news of the past few weeks.

"On balance, we see no sharp drop at this time in the total number of students who will be employed," said Dr. Frank S. Endicott, emeritus director of placement at Northwestern University.

For the last 29 years, Endicott has queried more than 100 American companies each November on how many graduating students they expect to employ the following summer, what specialties they are most interested in and what salaries they expect to offer.

"I was prepared to find a repeat of the 1970-71 years, when there was a reduction of more than 20 per cent in jobs offered," he said recently.

"There is always the possibility of a downturn in company hiring quotas. But as of now, we see no marked cutback in the total number of graduates that companies plan to hire in 1975."

STARTING SALARIES mentioned by company interviewers and by the firms responding to Endicott's survey were all from 5 to 7 per cent higher than last year's, reflecting, the placement officer said, the inflationary trend.

Graduating engineers could expect starting salaries around $1,062 a month, while chemistry graduates might look forward to $992 and accountants $960. For most of the other fields, salaries would be around $850 a month.

Of the 160 companies, representing all types of business interests, that responded to Endicott's queries, 59 per cent said they would need more graduates in 1975 than they did this year, while 41 per cent said they would need fewer and 9 per cent said they expected to hire the same number as in 1974.

The companies indicated that they would be hiring more women from the 1975 class than from last year's.

THE ENDICOTT SURVEY also showed that these companies expected to hire more engineers, accountants, and sales-marketing graduates than they did in 1974 and that once again there would be two to three times the demand for those specialists than for graduates in liberal arts, mathematics or economics.

Other college placement directors said they had found the same proportion of interest in specialties. But several added that the market for would-be journalists, social workers and teachers was flooded in many sections and that at best applicants for such jobs would have to look in less desirable areas if they wanted to find work.

Many companies who want to keep themselves in compliance with the government's "affirmative action" program for hiring women and minorities have been concentrating their interviewing on those groups.

"Proctor & Gamble came to us and asked to interview only female and minority students," said J.K. Hillstrom, placement coordinator at Wayne State University in Detroit. "We finally had to tell the companies that they had to talk to everybody."

Job opportunities for graduates in the humanities have never been as good as for those in technology or the business field, and this year they are worse than last.

And several placement officers noted they were now hearing from earlier graduates seeking jobs after being laid off recently.

Many of the college placement heads say they were warning their graduates that they would have to look a lot harder this year for a job and that they would have to be more flexible in what they looked for and where they wanted to work.

Oil imports tighten economic deficits

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Oil exporting nations will record enormous trade surpluses this year, while industrialized countries will suffer inflation and slowed economic growth, an international bank said Tuesday.

The oil exporting countries will run a $65 billion surplus for 1974, compared with just $5 billion a year ago, the Societe Financiere Europeenne (SFE), a Paris-based multinational bank, said in a year-end survey.

At the same time, eight major industrial nations will run a total balance of payments deficit of $31 billion for 1974 as a result of oil price boosts. These countries achieved a $9 billion surplus in 1973, the report said.

"Since it is impossible in the short term for the oil importing countries to drastically remedy their payments position either by exporting their way clear from the burden of higher oil costs or by cutting back on oil imports, the only practical remedy has been to borrow back the greater proportion of funds accrued by the oil exporting nations," said the SFE, a combine of eight banks including the Bank of America headquartered in San Francisco.

The survey predicted Japan would experience 22.8 per cent inflation in 1975 with a 1.5 per cent slump in gross national product (GNP) and would be hardest hit by oil cost impact.

It said the U.S. inflation rate would ease to 9 per cent from a present pace of more than 12 per cent. GNP should gain 1 per cent.

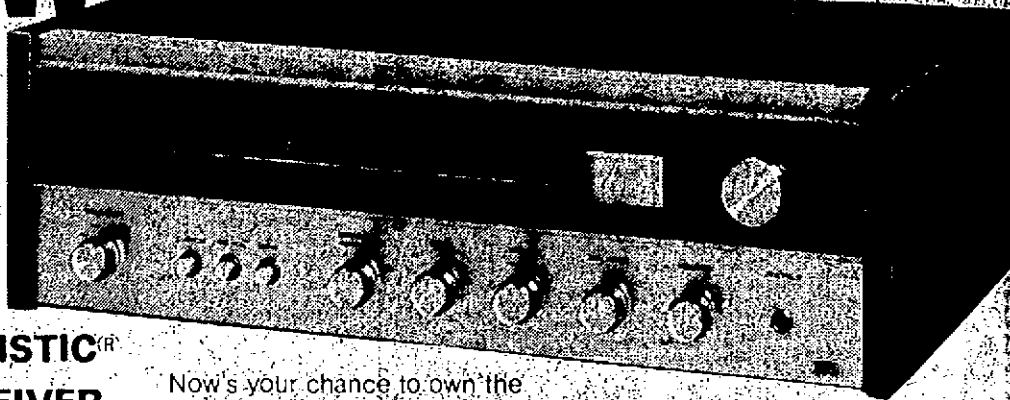

The outlook reported the United Kingdom's 1975 inflation rate would be 20 per cent with a 1.5 per cent gain in GNP.

12 pct. less than in 1973

Holiday mail off this year, study shows

Associated Press
Americans apparently mailed fewer cards, letters and packages than usual this Christmas because of concern over the economy and inflation, an Associated Press sampling shows.

Postal officials around the country said Tuesday that the volume of holiday mail will be anywhere from about 5 to 25 per cent smaller than in 1973, depending on the area.

"People have the money for cards and stamps, but they're afraid to spend it," said Larry Shelvey, a U.S. Postal Service spokesman in Boston. "They don't know what's coming next."

Shelvey said the volume of holiday mail is 12 to 15 per cent less than last year. He said part of the drop was due to the higher charge for first class mail (10 cents as opposed to 8 cents last year).

In Washington, D.C., a spokesman for the U.S. Postal Service said officials expected to handle 8 to 10 per cent less mail than last year on a nationwide basis during the 1974 holiday season which runs between Thanksgiving and beyond Christmas to New Years.

Fewer pieces of mail also means fewer holiday jobs for applicants who used to pick up extra money for Christmas. Shelvey said only about 200 temporary clerks and carriers have been hired this year in the Boston postal district, compared to 400 last year.

Postal officials in Cleveland, Ohio, said a record-breaking 11,400 persons applied for temporary holiday postal jobs, but only 400 were hired. Six years ago, some 4,000 persons were hired to handle the Christmas crush.

The officials said the tight job market this year helped push up the number of applications, while a smaller volume of mail and increased mechanization cut the hiring list.

"When times are hard, applications zoom," one official said. "When outside employment is good, the number of job-seekers drops drastically."

Walter J. Kalamasz, postal manager of logistics in the Cleveland office, said that as of Friday, some 3 million pieces of first-class mail had been handled during December, 9 per cent fewer than in the same period of 1973.

There were 126 million packages and other items of nonfirst-class mail handled in the first 20 days of this December, 14 per cent less than last year.

Kalamasz said it was the first time in 24 years that mailing declined. He said mail volume previously had been growing by 2 per cent a year.

William G. Hanna, postmaster for Jackson, Miss., said that Christmas volume during the first 20 days of December was 2.3 per cent less than last year. "It seems to indicate that the economic situation has had an adverse affect, even here in Jackson," although I don't believe it's had as much impact here as in other places," Hanna said.

He also said that people waited a little later to mail this year" and predicted volume would pick up to match 1973 levels.

Los Angeles officials said the volume of mail as of last Friday was 14 per cent below 1973 and predicted that by the end of the Christmas season volume would be off 7 per cent.

Individuals have been sending fewer Christmas cards and packages while companies with their own business slowed are sending fewer letters," said Postmaster James Sym-bol.

Philadelphia postmaster Vincent Logan said the volume of all types of holiday mail including packages is down about 24 per cent from last year. Total revenue, including stamp sales, is down 9.2 per cent.

In Tucson, Ariz., officials said they had handled only 33.8 million letters between Nov. 30 and late December this year, compared to 36 million in the same period last year. Postmaster Arnold Elias said many people apparently are cutting back their Christmas mailing lists and added, "We certainly are an indicator of the general economy."

A spokesman for United Parcel Service, which handles about 3 million packages a day, said it was too early to tell whether volume would match last year's.

So far, he said, business is down in some areas. The greeting card industry estimates that Americans bought four billion Christmas cards in 1973, but some retailers reported that sales were down this year.

MRS. BARBARA CARTWRIGHT of Eccles, Lancashire, England, decorates a tree at the home of her brother, Wallace Tower in Chepachet, R.I.

—AP Wirephoto

Across the Atlantic Family reunited for Yule after 45 years

CHEPACHET, R.I. (AP)—When Barbara Cartwright got a call from her brother last fall, "she turned crimson, then white, and dropped the phone," her husband says.

Mrs. Cartwright, adopted 45 years ago, did not know she had four brothers and a sister living in Rhode Island and in Nova Scotia.

Now, the family is together again for Christmas in Chepachet, the first full family reunion since Mrs. Cartwright was 11 months old.

The story began in West Sackville, N.B., in 1929, when the parents of Barbara Tower died within a month of each other.

All the children went to live with aunts and uncles except Barbara, who was taken in by Rev. Lionel Foyster, the rector of the Church of England in Sackville. The new family never told Barbara she was adopted, and in 1930, the Foysters moved to Borley, England.

SHE SAID she was 14 when a member of the family let it slip that her real name was Tower.

"I knew then that I had been adopted," she said. "I always wondered who my real father and mother were, but I never visualized that I had brothers and sisters. I truly thought I was an only child."

Foyster died in 1945, and all contact was lost with the family back home, whom Barbara was told were distant cousins.

Barbara married Gordon Cartwright, while her brothers and sisters tried unsuccessfully to find her.

Eventually, friends of Wallace Tower of Chepachet asked Alan Roper, an author who had researched the Anglican rectory where Barbara had lived, to track her down. Last fall, he found she was living in Eccles, Lancashire. The call from Wallace Tower followed, inviting the Cartwrights to spend Christmas in Rhode Island.

"In the days ahead, Gordon and I pinched ourselves many times to make sure this was real," Mrs. Cartwright said. "It was not until we set foot at Kennedy Airport in New York that we knew it was not a fairy tale."

'Spirit of alcohol' ends midnight mass

HARTSDALE, N.Y. (UPI)—The Priests and Parish Council of the Sacred Heart Church here canceled the traditional Christmas midnight mass, blaming the action on "a spirit of alcohol" and an atmosphere of "religious nostalgia."

"There's nothing theological or liturgical that says you must have the first mass of Christmas at midnight, although it's a venerable tradition," Father James Connolly, the church's pastor, said.

Connolly added that he knew of several other churches that have also canceled their midnight mass services.

"Being late at night, some people come more with the spirit of alcohol than the spirit of Christmas," Connolly said. "There are some, mainly young people in their twenties, who look upon the church mass as some sort of religious nostalgia. It's not a curiosity. It's an event of worship," he added.

Connolly said the problem of drinking seems to occur "in areas of our city which are more affluent. There's more money for alcohol and imbibing."

Father Joseph Hickey, who has been at the church for two years, said that last year the priest delivering the sermon had to pound the podium to stop people from chatting.

"Some people — not many but some — were extremely disrespectful, almost contemptuously ridiculing the service," Hickey said.

Both priests, however, said there was a positive aspect to the action taken by the Parish Council.

"We are a family church and celebrate eight Sunday masses every week," Connolly said. "We wanted to make a Christmas service more attractive to families with small children, so instead of a midnight mass, we are celebrating two masses at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m."

badly charred.

The Rev. Carl C. Schroedel, pastor of the church, said he was "very disappointed that some people have to get their pleasure by destroying something that represents tolerance and forgiveness and gives pleasure to other people."

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP)—A manger scene outside Peace United Church of Christ was heavily damaged by fire in pre-dawn darkness Tuesday, after two earlier attempts to destroy it.

Lady Santa no Ms-fit to trusting kids

NORTH PLAINFIELD, N.J. (UPI) — Linda Radice has mixed feelings about her 21 days as a department store Santa Claus. Among the hardships of the job were 15 children who wet on her and parents who blurted out, "That's a lady!"

"I love the kids, but the parents were too much," Mrs. Radice, 22, said Tuesday. She was one of five full-time Santas trained this year by Western Temporary Services, Inc., to work in New York and New Jersey.

Mrs. Radice, who describes herself as "heavy, not thin," has dressed up in a red velvet suit, a white wig and beard and black boots six days a week since Thanksgiving to play Santa in the Middlesex Mall. Usually, it was the mothers who recognized the woman behind the costume.

"I had people stand there with a million little kids around and say, 'Look at how fake the Santa's beard is,' or "That's a lady! I could have killed them."

"About 15 times kids wet on me. I think I hold the record at Western. They gave me a new pair of pants after a few weeks," Mrs. Radice said.

The first problem Mrs. Radice faced as Santa was learning to walk and sit like a man. She stuck out her padded stomach, kept her legs apart and lowered her voice.

"With a woman it's hard. You have to have a stomach and not a bust. But when you put on the suit, you experience sort of a transformation. It's an acting job, but I'm a ham anyway," she said.

Mrs. Radice, who has a 2-year-old daughter of her own, said she had an advantage over men playing Santa. She said women naturally have better rapport with children and are not afraid to handle them.

"With little babies, they'd feel natural if I spoke with my own voice," she said.

The best age group was children 2 to 6 years old. "You could look at their eyes and tell they really believed you were Santa," she said.

There was only one time when Mrs. Radice said she found it impossible to maintain her role as Santa. That was when a boy named "Jimmy," who was paralyzed from the waist down, sat on her lap.

"He was so joyful. He really believed in me. He put his arms around me and said, 'You know, Santa Claus, I love you.' 'He made me cry. He really made Christmas for me this year,' Mrs. Radice said.

Santa in jobless line

Gerry Flynn, 24, an unemployed school teacher, borrowed a Santa Claus suit to wear in Albany, N.Y., to cheer up others while waiting in line for his unemployment check. He got laughs and applause as he passed out candy canes.

Russia's churches busy on Christmas

MOSCOW (AP) — In a dispatch called "On the Days of Christmas Holidays," the official Soviet news agency Tass gave this report Tuesday on observances of Christmas in the Soviet Union:

Moscow's Polish-Roman Catholic Church of Saint Louis was decorated on the eve of the holiday with garlands of fir tree branches and lamps of various colors.

The dean of the church, Priest Stanislaw Mazheika, called upon the parishioners in his address after the divine service to perform their evangelic duty to "serve the strengthening of peace among nations."

Present at the celebration Mass in the church together with Moscow Catholics were members of the diplomatic corps and foreign tourists.

Festively decorated New Year's trees were installed in many houses of Catholic and Lutheran inhabitants of Tallinn. Housewives cooked the traditional Christmas dishes—roast turkeys and geese, blood sausage, pastry with pepper and spice.

Celebration masses opened in churches late in the evening. Archbishop Alfred Toomring, head of the Evangelic-Lutheran church in Estonia, welcomed parishioners in the Dome Cathedral in Tallinn. He noted in his speech the successes recently scored by the Christians and all the people of good will in the field of consolidation of peace.

Addressing the believers on the holiday night in the Peter and Paul Catholic Church, Priest Antanas Dilis said: "Happiness in the world depends on peace, and we ourselves must build a peaceful life. People must remember that they are members of one family."

Bells pealed Tuesday night in the temples of other parishes of Lithuania — Panevezis, Kaishjador, Vilkaivis and Kaunas.

A correspondent reports from Lvov on the celebration services in the cathedrals of the city, as well as in the cathedrals of Sambor, Zolochov and other towns of the Carpathians.

Gifts, everything stolen
Burglar leaves only chill for Christmas

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — "This will mean no Christmas for my children," said Alfreedia Brown. "All I have left is about $2.35."

The home of Mrs. Brown, who has two children, was burglarized Sunday night, and all the Christmas gifts were stolen.

Only one small package, apparently dropped by the burglars, has been found. Police say there is little hope of recovering the rest of the gifts.

Mrs. Brown, a divorcee who says she gets no child support from her former husband, said her insurance policy does not cover theft and that she has no savings. And she said she expects to be laid off for two weeks in January when the baking company for which she works shuts down temporarily.

"This is unbelievable," she said. "You never think it will happen to you. But if it had to happen, why at Christmas?"

Mrs. Brown said most of the presents contained school clothes for her 10-year-old daughter, April, and her 4-year-old son, Johnathan.

"The kids have been needing winter coats and shoes for four months, but I don't give them anything they need from September on," she said. "I buy some things and hide them until Christmas."

"It's really only clothes and the coats they need for school and things like pajamas and robes and slippers. But this way it makes a lot of packages and it looks like they're getting a lot for Christmas."

Some 64 gifts were taken. Among other items stolen were a stereo, a portable television set and a piggy bank containing $35 with which Mrs. Brown intended to buy food for their Christmas dinner.

There will be a few gifts under the Christmas tree. One relative stopped by with some money. A sister of Mrs. Brown brought one outfit of clothing for each child and local store donated a bag of toys.

Bandits loot home; family gives up city

BROCKTON, Mass. (UPD) — It was a burglar through the bedroom window instead of Santa Claus down the chimney. He was an evening early and took presents instead of leaving them.

The holiday robbery wrecked the Christmas plans of the Stephen Stetson family and the bitter young couple immediately loaded a truck to move out of the city.

"We've had it with city life where families get ripped off by thieves every night," said Stetson, 21. He and his wife Brenda, 18, and baby daughter Jennifer had left their first floor apartment Monday night for a pre-Christmas celebration with a Chinese dinner.

When they returned, they found the bedroom window forced open and all but a few of the gaily-wrapped Christmas presents stolen.

Stetson and his wife took a pencil and pad and figured the presents they were going to give each other, mostly clothing, was valued at $503.41. The thief left a pair of baby shoes and a rattle.

The victim loaded a truck with his other belongings and moved out of Brockton shortly after the robbery. He said he and his wife and daughter would move in with his mother and father in Whitman.

Woman, 103, fetes Christmas birthday

FREEHOLD, N.J. (UPD) — Mrs. Laura Wisam, born in a farmhouse near Jamesburg, N.J., on the snowy Christmas Eve in 1871, celebrated her 103th birthday Tuesday by cutting a cake and receiving well-wishes from her friends.

Mrs. Wisam cut the cake after blowing out 13 flickering candles, representing the 10 decades and three years during which she has seen 20 presidents come and go and nations plunge into two world wars.

Many of the 115 residents of the John L. Montgomery Home here joined for the punch-and-cake party for Mrs. Wisam, who rolls bandages and stuffs eye pads for the Monmouth County Medical Center under the federal Retired Seniors Volunteer Program.

Arlene Prince, a program coordinator, said Mrs. Wisam, married 83 years ago and a great-grandmother, is "alert both physically and mentally and is enjoying her work everyday."

"I don't regret any part of my life," the life-long New Jersey resident said. "I worked hard but that seemed to keep me healthy and happy. And after all, that's all that matters."

Looking gift horse in mouth
Beware of dog—in the stocking

By JOHN J. SANKO

DENVER (UPI) — Puppies and kittens stuffed into Christmas stockings make great photographs, but they can be trouble when they come as surprise gifts.

"It's very nice for grandma or Uncle John to suddenly decide to give the grandkids, or whoever, a pet, but the parents better be involved ahead of time," said R.T. Phillips, executive director of the American Humane Association.

"There are cases where a friend or member of the family thinks it would be nice to give a pet and the family or the parents are not ready to have one," Phillips said. "Or they may already have one and they can't take another."

He said the rate of animals arriving at public or private animal shelters immediately after Christmas is usually 10 to 20 per cent higher than normal.

The same thing happens after Easter, he said, when rabbits, chickens and ducks sometimes are given as presents.

"A pet is a fine gift, but there should be preparation for it," Phillips said. "If you give it to a youngster who is not old enough to care for it, it usually ends up the responsibility of mother, and she may not want it."

Phillips says pets should be given before or after Christmas Day and they should be the more common varieties such as dogs or cats.

There's too much going on at Christmas Day for a small animal to fit into the scene, he said. "Particularly if it's a small kitten or puppy, the excitement is bad."

"It would be better if there's a gift certificate or if the pet has been given ahead of time and doesn't get into the excitement of all the family and relatives being there."

As for exotic pets, "Most people have no idea what their needs are," he said. "There are some real problems here, and we're more and more concerned with this because there are too many dangers."

He said some of the unusual pets are still wild animals, "and... unless they're in the hands of an expert whose whole life is devoted to handling and caring for them, then they're still not going to be able to completely get away from their potential of turning to the wild."

But for those who buy the right pet and have made certain it will be cared for, "it's a good thing under the right circumstances, particularly in view of the fact we do have an animal surplus," Phillips said.

"The biggest problem that seems to exist is getting them into the hands of responsible owners."

Santa wig-maker bucks trend

NEW YORK (AP) — Bucking traditional economists bound by charts, graphs and statistics, Adolph Jacoby of Manhattan is optimistic about business.

Jacoby manufactures more than 10,000 Santa wigs and beards each year for the Volunteers of America, stores, shopping centers and institutions around the country.

"It's been a good year for us," he said. "Not the best, not the worst. But good, and better than I expected."

And, Jacoby added, the beard business has been an infallible indicator of economic conditions for the past 15 years.

"When my beard business is good all business has been good, and this year my business is good."

Jacoby's beards and wigs retail for from $6 to $150 a set. They are made from nylon because, he said "yak hair yellows."

Girl loses dad in border hassle

NIAGARA FALLS, ONT. (UPI)—A 9-year-old Polish girl had just one wish for Christmas—to be reunited with her father.

She was almost certain to be disappointed.

The child, Sylvia Maslowski, was left by her father on the Canadian-U.S. border nearly two months ago when they were refused entry by U.S. immigration authorities.

The pair, and four members of another Polish family with them, were using false U.S. birth certificates and other documents, officers said.

They were sent back across the Rainbow Bridge to be questioned on the Canadian side. While waiting to be interviewed, Sylvia's father, Marion Maslowski, disappeared and has not been seen since despite an intensive hunt.

His disappearance marked the start of fear, tension and tears for Sylvia, a little girl alone in a strange country, confronted by officials asking bewildering questions.

SHE KEPT silent on most details — where they came from, where they were headed for in the United States and whether there were any other members of her family in North America.

Even today authorities don't know where her mother is, or even if she is still alive.

Sylvia was made a temporary ward of the local Family Services Department and placed in a foster home, where the accident.

parents have children of their own.

That's where Sylvia is spending Christmas.

SHE'LL SIT down to a lavish Christmas dinner, get toys from the foster family and the Family Services Department, play with the other youngsters and wish to see her father again.

"Perhaps she won't be as happy as she could be, but we are doing everything possible to make her feel at home," Karen Hanley, the department's information officer, said Tuesday.

"She is quite a resilient child and is getting along rather well now."

"However, we would like to hear from her father. He just seems to have melted away. We don't know many of the facts. In fact, the whole case is something of a puzzle."

Meanwhile, the second family barred by U.S. authorities—Polish welder Kola Kaminski, his wife and two children — have been placed in a refugee center as Canadian officials try to learn more about them.

DI takes rap

Marine recruits get their leaves

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The heat was taken by an unnamed drill instructor Tuesday after his platoon's failure to pass inspection, causing restrictions over Christmas, brought a torrent of protests onto the Marine Corps recruit depot.

"We've had calls from parents and congressmen, a spokesman said. The drill instructor has been relieved of duties."

The Christmas home leaves scheduled to start Tuesday for 79 recruits of Platoon 3110 was put off until December 28 when they failed inspection by Maj. A. V. Latorre, who heads the 3rd Training Battalion.

But the spokesman said "a command decision" made following calls from throughout the U.S. allowed all the young men but four to make it through a special inspection.

The four unlucky ones weren't identified.

Yule spirit foils robber

MOUNTAIN VIEW (AP) — The Christmas spirit apparently got the better of a knife-wielding robber who tried to hold up a Salvation Army worker at a shopping center here.

Mary Jane Stanley, 19, an Army volunteer, told police she was ringing her bell by the collection bucket containing $30 to $40 Thursday night when a well-dressed man carrying a five-inch knife demanded the money.

"But you'll be taking food away from the needy children," Patrolman John Muller quoted Miss Stanley as saying.

On hearing this, the man's face fell and he turned and fled without the money, she said.

New heart gives youth, family special holiday

WARWICK, R.I. (UPI) — One of the first things Patrick Sherlock did when he arrived home was sit down and play his drums. He wanted to see if he could still carry a beat — because inside him another person's heart is carrying the beat.

Patrick, 16, is home for the first time since last summer, when he underwent the first of two heart transplants.

"THIS IS indeed a very special Christmas present for the family," said his mother on Christmas Eve. "The youngster arrived home from the Stanford University Medical Center Monday night for a reunion with his family that will last until Sunday, when he must fly back for further medical attention."

Patrick is a victim of cardiomyopathy, a disease that causes enlargement of the heart muscle. He was suddenly stricken with it while on a camping trip with his family last summer.

At first doctors tried to use a pacemaker to keep him alive, but his heart became increasingly weak and there was no

'Message' for victims of strokes

Recently Kleen rode a bicycle 28 miles in the American Heart Association's cyclethon. He swims daily, does 20 push-ups a day, lifts up to 50-pound weights and works four hours a day at his psychiatric practice.

Kleen, 49, has a message for others who find themselves in the condition he was in. He wants to urge them not to give up.

"THERE are many patients who just die in hospitals — just forgotten," he said. "I don't want any riches. I just want to reach these people and tell them how. You have to work, work, work every day and fight."

Kleen suffered his stroke on the night he and his wife Blanca were going to celebrate 25 years of marriage.

As Kleen was about to shower before going out, his body went limp and he fell to the floor. He tried to move and he couldn't. He tried to speak and only babbled. He was helpless with his entire right side paralyzed from his face to his toes.

KLEEN attributes his recovery to determination.

"I'm very compulsive," Kleen said. "My children call me stubborn. I want to accomplish. Just look at me. After the stroke, I was bent. My son recorded my voice and I was like a baby. Now I speak very nice, don't you think?"

The road back was difficult. He still uses a cane and stumbles over words when he tries to talk too fast.

"Sometimes it was very hard because we wanted to help him," Blanca said. "When he first tried to button his shirt, we ran to him and he got so angry. 'Don't help me,' he shouted. It took him an hour, but he did it himself."

KLEEN'S recovery was a family effort. One daughter played catch with him. A son was his driving companion.

"I read with him," said daughter Marta. "Two months after his stroke, he could read a sentence in 10 minutes. We used language books for beginners. Then we advanced to newspapers and to medical articles."

"His reading was so intense. I would get a little impatient sometimes because it took him so long, but that's only human."

other alternative but a transplant, his mother said.

IN AUGUST he received the heart of a 28-year-old man killed in a glider accident. But that organ showed signs of being rejected and another transplant was performed in October.

"His trip home is a very special treat which is an exception to all the rules, but the doctors examined him before he left California and they decided it will do him more good than harm," Mrs. Sherlock said.

His father, Paul V. Sherlock, is head of the Department of Special Education at Rhode Island College. "We're extremely happy that Patrick can be home for Christmas to see his friends once again," he said.

MRS. SHERLOCK says the family does not plan to have a big holiday celebration, just a quiet get-together. Their home has been sterilized to prevent possible infections that could cause another rejection of Patrick's new heart, and there will be a minimum of visitors.

The Sherlocks have four other children, all younger than Patrick. And on Christmas morning they will all gather in the living room around the tree Patrick helped decorate to open presents.

"There's no better Christmas present than the one Patrick has already given us. That's being home once again," Mrs. Sherlock said.

Gifts in open car trunk fail to tempt passing shoppers

COSTA MESA (AP) — How many people, passing by an open car with a trunk full of Christmas presents, would be tempted to take one?

Two newspaper reporters decided to find out. And they learned, to their surprise, inflation notwithstanding, that honesty triumphed over greed.

The reporters from the Orange Coast Daily Pilot parked the car at a shopping plaza over the weekend, leaving the trunk lid ajar as if it had failed to latch.

Then they hid in a nearby camper, trained a telephoto lens on the car and prepared to take pictures of anyone who pilfered the presents. The newspaper planned to print pictures of the Christmas thieves in its next edition.

But all the camera captured was six passersby who noticed the open trunk and promptly slammed the lid shut to protect the presents—which were actually old car parts and newspapers wrapped like gifts.

Liver transplant champ can't go home for Yule

By MARC WILSON
DENVER (AP) — Marty Cox is the longest surviving liver transplant patient in the world. He is 17, unable to walk and plans to spend Christmas in a hospital room alone.

"They promised I could go home for Christmas—but now the doctors say I'm too sick to go," he said.

He says his parents can't afford to visit him any more. "They don't have the money, and Ohio is a long way away."

Marty's liver was transplanted July 14, 1969, in Colorado General Hospital, when he was 11 years old.

Since then he has spent much of his time shuttling between his parents' home in Nova, Ohio, and Denver.

He entered the hospital the last time in November 1973.

His mother, Mrs. Robert Cox, reached by phone at her home, said, "My husband has borrowed money for trips to Denver until we're so far in the hole there's nothing we can do."

She said her husband, an auto assembly line worker for Ford, tried unsuccessfully to find a job in Denver.

"I went out to Denver in August after his psychiatrist told me he was terribly depressed and needed companionship. I stayed with him for 2½ months, then our money ran out and I had to come home," she said.

She said she and her husband have borrowed "at least $2,000 in the last three or four months so I could see Marty. But the banks just aren't lending out money like they used to."

Mrs. Cox said she promised Marty "he'd be home for Christmas, but now the hospital says he's got to stay there."

"His Christmas presents from last year are still under the Christmas tree unopened. He said he didn't want them 'til he got back home. From what some of the doctors say, I don't know if he'll ever come home."

Marty says he knows the Christmas presents are waiting for him. "Yeah, they're still at home. And I want to be home to get them."

"But what I really want is to go home and stay home."

Fear of kidnap mutes Jingle Bells

Guard dogs under Italy yule trees

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Fear of being kidnaped in abduction-prone Italy spurred a new line of Christmas gift suggestions for the wealthy ranging from killer guard dogs to James Bond-inspired electronic devices.

"Get yourself an Alsatian dog for Christmas," reads the advertisement of a kennel near Milan, but it is not offering puppies for children.

The advertisements were aimed instead at businessmen and industrialists frightened by the 43 kidnappings in Italy this year.

"I sold trained Alsatian dogs to top company executives, industrialists, actors and professional men and the demand is still growing," said Giuseppe Zuliani, owner of the kennel.

His dogs, whose price tags are in the $1,600-$4,800 range, attack anyone who assaults their masters or any intruder. They can kill a man if not stopped, Zuliani said.

Electronic equipment firms have put on sale microtransmitters and signaling devices which can be hidden in a match box or in the heel of a shoe enabling police to trace the whereabouts of the kidnap victim. Most of the devices are imported from England and range in price from several hundred to several thousand dollars.

Italians are also hiring bodyguards or taking judo lessons, inspired by a teen-age girl in Turin who sent her would-be kidnaper fleeing with well-placed karate chops.

They also are turning to insurance companies offering policies designed to meet ransoms ranging into the millions of dollars. Insurance companies have refused to disclose the premium for such policies, but sources estimate it is 2 or 3 per cent of the insured amount.

But sociologists say the most worrisome result of the kidnaping fears is the increasing tendency to turn to guns, bodyguards and private police.

Police sources confirm that sales of pistols and the demand for firearms licenses have risen sharply this year.

In Rome, actresses such as Audrey Hepburn and Claudia Cardinale travel with bodyguards to pick up their children at school while some industrialists have disguised their strong-arm men as servants or drivers.

Mondialpol, or world police, and Cittadini dell'Ordine citizens of order, two private protection agencies in Turin and Milan, have armored cars and employ about 1,000 men outfitted in police uniforms and armed with pistols.

This indicates that people no longer trust state justice and the regular police, a Milan sociologist said.

In the majority of cases, the kidnapers have escaped detection. Police cracked only 12 of the 40 abductions reported through November and only one case so far resulted in a conviction. The latest kidnaping was staged a few days ago in Naples. The victim was a wealthy cement manufacturer.

Naples police said that the kidnapers of cement manufacturer Giuseppe Moccia, 53, had demanding $3 million for his release.

Police in Milan reported Luigi Genghini, 28-year-old son of an auto dealer, was released by kidnapers after five weeks' captivity. They did not say whether a ransom had been paid.

Genghini was snatched in downtown Milan on Nov. 14, shortly after leaving his father's office. Police said he was released on the outskirts of the city.

But a little late

New holly strain brighter, greener

By NICHOLAS JOLLYMORE

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (UPI) — A Rutgers University professor says he finally has developed a glossier, greener, female variety of American holly with brilliant red berries, but it came too late for Christmas this year.

In fact, it will probably be several years before it's available in large quantities.

But when it is, Professor Elwin Orton says his new strain of holly will meet a yuletide demand commercial growers cannot now fill.

He says it will be a direct competitor with the traditional English holly, the type usually pictured on Christmas cards.

English holly grows primarily in the temperate regions of Oregon, while American holly can grow in colder regions and survive hot summers. But it is considered the less attractive bush.

ORTON'S strain, with its bright red berries, grows in a densely packed cone-shaped tree. He says, "It has the deepest, greenest glossiest leaves that I have ever seen."

Although it took Orton 14 years to breed the strain, its history goes back to the 1947, when a small number of holly enthusiasts in New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland were combing the woods looking for the glossiest leaves.

Rutgers researchers selected their samples from that batch, and one of the varieties, called the "Jersey Knight," has gained a reputation among gardeners as a dense, glossy, ornamental house tree.

There is only one problem — the Jersey Knight is a male, and therefore has no red berries.

It has taken 14 years for Orton and his colleagues to successfully mate the Jersey Knight with enough female holly trees to produce a dense, glossy-leaf tree which does have berries. The new bush lacks a formal name.

Although holly is used mostly for hedges and ornamental yard trees, a large amount is harvested wild or in orchards for Christmas sprays and wreaths.

The largest producer of American holly is Daniel Fenton, who grows the wild variety in an orchard in Millville, N.J.

He expected no problem in selling his 100,000 pounds of Christmas holly harvest.

"I don't think I have enough holly to supply the city of New York alone," he said. "We don't even attempt to sell in the Midwest."

Orton said his new variety will make it possible for people in most parts of the country to grow holly trees in their yards and take cuttings at Christmas.

He said American holly can even thrive in urban environments because it is resistant to air pollution.

Beating puts a stop to group's caroling

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — The director of a church youth group said Tuesday his organization may not do any more Christmas caroling because the last time they tried it he and nine others were attacked and beaten up.

Steven McCleary, 26, director at the Grace Wesleyan Youth Fellowship, told police the group was roughed up by three young men while they were singing Christmas carols Monday night.

McCleary was treated at Mercy Hospital for a cut lip and David Hall, 15, was treated for multiple bruises after being kicked in the groin area. The eight others were hurt less seriously.

McCleary said the group was orally harassed by three youths riding in a car as the carolers walked down the street.

He said one of the three then got out of the car started beating him while the two others kicked and slapped other members of the group.

The director said the group won't do any more caroling this year and added, "I don't know if we'll do it next year after this."

Caroler mistaken for prowler

CANTON, Ohio (UPI) — Judith Lombard, 10, Canton, who was shot in the chest by a shot from a rifle while singing Christmas carols with several friends in front of a residence here, was reported Tuesday in satisfactory condition at Aultman Hospital.

The children were delivering cookies to an elderly couple and decided to sing in front of their home, where the residents had gone to bed early. The couple woke up and thought there were prowlers at the front door. A shot through the door wounded Judith. The others, unhurt, scampered away.

Canton police said it was an accidental shooting, as "the couple apparently was scared."

'Cadillac funerals' losing popularity

Cost of dying rising less than living cost

By MARC WILSON

DENVER (AP) — Americans are battling the spiraling cost of living by trimming the costs of dying.

"There is no doubt that in times of economic distress people are more cautious in planning funerals," says Howard Raether, executive director of the National Funeral Directors Association.

He cited statistics saying the over-all cost of living has increased 51.9 per cent since 1967, while the cost of dying has risen 36.5 per cent. From September 1973 to September 1974 the cost of living rose 12.1 per cent, while the cost of dying rose 6.2 per cent.

"Those figures are a good indication that funeral directors and their customers are taking a good look at the costs of funerals and are doing a good job of easing the costs," Raether said in an interview.

He said costs are reduced by buying less expensive coffins and accessories, and by having less elaborate funerals. He said the average cost of a funeral is $1,117, excluding burial plots, clothing, transportation and the opening and closing of graves. With those items the average cost is about $2,000, he said.

"The number of cremations — the cheapest type of body disposal — has also increased significantly. Since 1960 cremations have increased from 3.5 per cent of all body disposals to 5.6 per cent," he said.

Francis Van Derbur, president of the Denver Olinger Mortuaries, says his customers "are often much more conservative" in their buying. "We have many more people interested in cheaper caskets and cheaper linings. And the interest in cremations is the highest ever."

Jack St. Germain, undertaker and Adams County coroner, says he's handled more cremations in the last four years than in his first 14 years in business.

"It's a matter of finances, and partly a matter of people's values changing. Every time the economy takes a jolt people become more conscious of price," he said.

"There are Cadillac funerals and there are motorbike funerals. More people than ever can accept the motorbike funeral."

St. Germain said, "The cheapest body disposal is a cremation with no memorial service. If all you want is a body disposed of, I can do it for $297. Of course, a Cadillac funeral can go as high as you want it."

Caskets are usually the most expensive item in a funeral, and casket companies say their business has suffered.

Aromatic 'sex chemical' found in young women

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Atlanta medical researchers have isolated aromatic "sex attractant" chemicals from the vaginal secretions of healthy young women. Such chemicals, called pheromones, have previously been found in virtually all animals, and insects, but their presence in humans, though long suspected, had not been previously confirmed.

The Atlanta studies showed that the chemicals were present in largest amounts during the woman's fertile period.

THE STUDIES, which are published in the December 27 issue of Science, also showed that women who were taking oral contraceptives had fewer of these chemicals and that the cyclical changes in their amount were absent.

These same chemicals, aliphatic acids which have what one researcher called a generally unpleasant, vinegary odor, have previously been isolated from the vaginal secretions of many species of monkeys. They have been shown to stimulate sexual behavior in the male monkey and will cause him to "work" to get access to a female who is secreting them, according to Dr. Richard Michael, who has directed the studies.

What role, if any, the chemicals play in human sexual behavior is as yet unknown, Michael said, "but it is rather interesting that they are there to start with, have a cyclic production rate and have a function in lower primates."

Michael, a psychiatrist at Emory University school of medicine and the Georgia Mental Health Institute, collaborated in the human studies with Dr. R.W. Bonsall and Patricia Warner.

MICHAEL said he believes that the chemicals may be important to the sexual behavior of "a small proportion of the human population, but not for the vast majority." In monkeys, he said, the chemicals were "not essential" to sexual behavior of the male, who will also operate on the basis of past experience with a certain female.

If the chemicals do play some role in human behavior, the attention most Americans pay to bathing and artificial scents would do much to negate it, he said.

Michael noted that "women who douche regularly" destroy the bacteria that produce these chemicals in the vaginal secretions." In his paper he added that "the current vogue this practice enjoys is based on widely felt anxieties about genital odors which may, in fact be wholly unnecessary and quite misplaced."

The vaginal bacteria also have an important health function, Michael pointed out. By creating an acid climate in the vagina, they help to suppress the growth of infections yeast. Yeast infections have been found to occur more frequently among women who take oral contraceptives, which are thought to inhibit the growth of acid-producing bacteria.

Expo '74 to be in red $500,000

By JOHN KUGLIN

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Future generations may say the Expo '74 world's fair stirred international environmental concern, but local businessmen will have to pay the final bills next year.

Expo was described as an apparent break-even, $85 million fair before it closed Nov. 3. Now it is heading for a deficit of some half million dollars, General Manager Petr Spurney says.

Spurney explained that estimates of the deficit vary greatly — "give or take $200,000" was his phrase — because some bills are yet to be collected and it isn't certain how much Expo will get for its remaining assets.

The 300 businessmen who guaranteed a $1.3 million bankroll if Expo couldn't pay back its bank loans have been notified to cover their pledges, Charles Aly, deputy general manager, said.

"We've only had one negative telephone call and one letter of complaint," he said.

The Expo '74 Corp. says the fair, dedicated to "Celebrating Tomorrow's Fresh, New Environment," will pump $700 million into Spokane's economy over a 10-year period.

The economy is bright in this eastern Washington city of 180,000, and no one is complaining — at least publicly — about the Expo deficit. The wheat crop — a mainstay of the economy — was good this year, 4,000 workers are on full shifts at local aluminum plants and most car dealers report record sales.

"Generally speaking, the attitude is that we never spent a better half million dollars in the community than the apparent Expo deficit," said Mayor David Rodgers.

Spurney says the fair's popularity ruined early projections indicating fiscal success.

Too many of the 5,187,000 persons passing through the turnstiles were season ticket holders visiting an average of 15 times instead of the projected five, he said.

"We had more fair than we had attendance to pay for," Aly said.

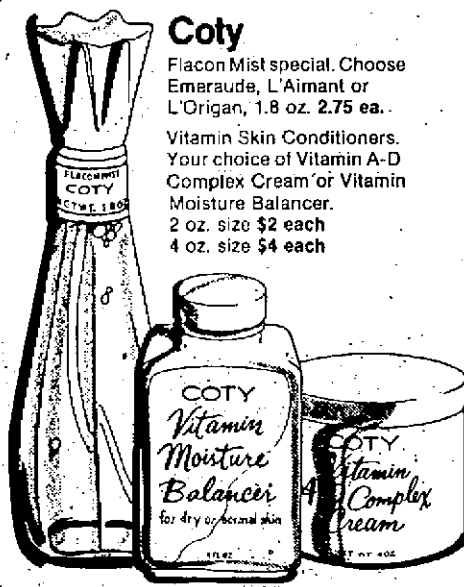

The fair is about 30 per cent recycled — Spurney prefers that term to dismantled — and Expo still hopes to recover some of the deficit by selling remaining assets, and collecting bills and a fat insurance rebate.

The fair's true financial condition may not even be known by Feb. 28, when the auditors begin examining the books, Spurney said.

'Get in, get out' Susan's attitude toward school

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Susan Ford says she hates politics, didn't follow the Watergate scandal and hasn't the least interest in the cover-up trial. But she agrees with her father's decision to pardon Richard M. Nixon.

"The poor guy had been through who knows what," Susan said. "He needed to be totally relieved. It's only fair. Congress is out to get him. I think it's bad enough what they've done to him already. They were going to stab him in the back. It's a nasty game, and I don't like it."

In an interview at the White House, Susan Elizabeth Ford spoke candidly about her distaste for politics and what it's like to be the President's only daughter.

At 17, she receives an allowance of about $7 a week. And she occasionally accepts a babysitting job. But now the Secret Service goes along. "They come in and help," she said. "It's very convenient."

She teases her father about being President — "bowing down to him, giving him the treatment." And he teases her in front of her steady boyfriend about dating other boys.

At dinner, which the Ford family usually has together, the President of the United States likes to discuss what his daughter did at school that day. "I feel like a little kid," Susan said, shaking her head.

Just that morning, her mother had reprimanded her for putting her feet up on her father's desk in the Oval Office. "That really bugs her," Susan said.

FOR THE INTERVIEW, Susan sat in the office of her mother's press secretary, Sheila Rabb Weidenfeld. It was exam week at Holton-Arms, a private school for girls in suburban Maryland, where Susan is a senior. Susan wore round, tortoise shell glasses and a navy-blue school uniform that fell about mid-thigh.

Asked if she followed the Watergate scandal that swept her father into the presidency, she replied matter-of-factly: "No. I don't read newspapers. It's a waste of time. I read magazines. I never watched the hearings. My father never watched them. My mother did. She'd turn them on, and my father would leave the room."

She said she hasn't followed the trial of Nixon's associates, who are accused of covering up the scandal. "It doesn't interest me in the least."

She said she has learned to ignore criticism and jokes about her father. "I can't say they've always criticized my father because they haven't. But I've been brought up to ignore that type of thing. At first I'd come home and go, 'Mother, that's not fair.' But she'd go, 'Ignore it.' I totally ignore all politics, all that stuff."

SHE IS UNINTIMIDATED by White House pomp, and appears determined to live as normally as possible. "People say the White House is stuffy," she said, crossing her legs and sipping cola from a can. "I don't think it is. Maybe it's us. I mean, it's really nice. It's like living in a hotel, though."

Unlike Nixon's daughters, Tricia and Julie, who made a point of never being seen in a pantsuit, Susan wears dungarees around the White House.

She said she hasn't been affected by the women's movement — "I mean, I believe in equal rights, but that's it. By her own account, she's more interested in getting married and having six children than a career."

"I don't want a job," she said. "I want to be an everyday person. I want to get out of the spectacle so badly. When I get out of college, I'm going out and live in the country, just here in Virginia. I'll have horses and dogs and cats. I'll be set."

Asked if she would consider living with someone before getting married, she shrugged. "It would all depend on the situation, the individual. I'd talk about it with my parents before I did it. I wouldn't do it behind their backs."

She said she would never smoke marijuana but thinks abortion is permissible "in the right situation."

"But I feel if someone has an abortion, they're killing a child. I don't think I could handle it emotionally because I love children too much."

Susan hates to read. "I love skiing, horseback riding and tennis. But I don't like to compete in sports." Friends say she does needlepoint, collects plants and has developed an interest in photography.

"DIDN'T YOU TELL someone you're interested in fashion?" Mrs. Weidenfeld asked.

Susan nodded. "A little...And writing. I wrote poems."

She delights in slipping out of the White House for an evening with her buddy, official White House photographer David Hume Kennerly, though she added quickly, "There's nothing between us."

Although she's followed everywhere by Secret Service agents, her father still checks up on her. She says she was babysitting once and forgot to tell the President where she would be. "So he called up the agents and said, 'Where's my daughter?' He thought I had taken off somewhere."

Gardner Britt, a tall, 18-year-old with

navy blond hair, has been Susan's steady boyfriend since they met on a blind date a year ago. Susan said she spends most of her weekends visiting Britt, who is a freshman at Virginia Polytechnic Institute in Blacksburg, Va. When they go on a date, Britt is said to drive while Secret Service follows in a car behind.

Susan said she doesn't have time to participate in all the activities a president's daughter is automatically invited to join.

"You're asked to be national chairman of some very odd things," she said. "My only responsibility — and I think my parents feel this way, too — is school. School is more important to them than anything."

Next fall she will attend Mt. Vernon College, a small, woman's school in Washington, D.C. Until a year ago it was a junior college.

"I wanted to go two years," Susan said when asked why she choose Mt. Vernon. "I'm not much of a student unless I really want to be. Get in, get out. That's all as far as I'm concerned."

Mt. Vernon officials are pleased the President's daughter wants to attend their school. "It gives us name recognition we didn't have in the past," said one, adding that Susan has expressed an interest in business retailing, merchandising, fashion marketing and childhood education.

But Susan doesn't like it when important people suddenly fawn over her. "It's not like they're interested in me as an individual, but because I'm the President's daughter. Sure I'm the President's daughter, but to me, big deal...Special attention really bugs me."

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

A special prayer this day of days

SOME YEARS AGO I wrote a promise to you. That this spot would always reflect the bright side, sometimes ironic or wry but always people sharing good times together. Sometimes — on really good days — I try to give you a human interest chuckle.

On other days I may tell you of a group or an individual who has achieved some civic recognition — usually in the service of others — mostly others who are not fortunate enough to share in the charity balls and benefits that are fun parties for those who attend and frequently the difference between gloom and glad for those who benefit from them.

In my haste (read mad scramble) to record the tinsel and gaiety of the holiday season, I neglected this year to send cards — with love — to family and friends.

The cards my family has received are eagerly opened and read, then prominently displayed in our home.

But there was one special greeting we received from a cherished friend a continent away that I might have mailed to friends had I known of it and had I taken the time away from material things.

It was written in the year 1513 by a monk named Fra Giovanni.

In the spirit of this season of sharing, I would like to share it with each of you.

"THERE IS NOTHING I can give you which you do not have, but there is much that while I cannot give it, you can take.

No Heaven can come to us unless our hearts find rest in it today. Take Heaven.

No Peace lies in our future which is not hidden in this present instant. Take Peace.

The gloom of the world is but a shadow, behind it, yet within reach is joy, there is radiance and glory in the darkness could we but see and to see we have only to look. I beseech you to look.

Life is so generous a giver, but we, judging its gifts by their coverings cast them away as ugly or heavy or hard. Remove the covering and you will find beneath a living splendor woven of love, by wisdom with power.

Welcome it, grasp it, and you touch the angel's hand that brings it to you. Everything we call a trial a sorrow or a duty, the angel's hand is there, the gift is there and the wonder of an overshadowing presence. Our joys too be not content with them as joys. They too conceal diviner gifts.

And so at this time I greet you, not quite as the world sends greetings, but with profound esteem and the prayer that for you, now and forever, the day breaks, the shadows flee away."

With sincere good wishes,
CAROLYN McDOWELL

But businessmen in doubt, consumers fearful

Commercial banks push for checkless society

By LEE MITGANG

NEW YORK (AP) — Faced with a volume of checks that doubles every 10 years, commercial banks have been pressing harder than ever lately for the start of a checkless, cashless society.

The dream revolves around the Electronic Funds Transfer System EFTS through which:

— Employers can deposit a worker's pay directly into the employee's bank account "Direct Pay Deposit."

— Gas, electric, telephone and other monthly bills can be paid out automatically by the bank.

— A purchase at a retail store can be accomplished simply by giving the salesman a plastic card that sends a message to the customer's bank via a "point of sale terminal," which in turn instantly adds to the store's account, and subtracts from the customer's.

Despite the fact that four cities — Los Angeles, San Francisco, Boston and Atlanta — now have Automated Clearing Houses which constitute the nucleus of the EFTS, the idea still seems to have a futuristic ring to backer of EFTS, many businessmen are unclear on the advantages of the system. And consumers are fearful EFTS could spell a threat to privacy and control over personal finances.

"So far, the operating assumption is that what's good for the banks is good for the country," says Tom Waage, senior vice president of the New York Federal Reserve, which plans to install an automated Clearing House facility in the first quarter of 1975.

Still, commercial banks insist that the volume of checks given a growth rate of 6 per cent yearly, will hit 40 billion by 1980. If nothing is done, they say, financial institutions will be faced with the same sort of paper havoc that almost submerged Wall Street in the '60s.

They also favor EFTS because check processing is a very costly business requiring a great deal of manpower. Check processing cost banks an estimated $1.2 billion last year.

In a recent paper prepared by the ABA, the point is made that paperless transfers would benefit consumers by eliminating the need to write many checks. That would mean a saving on postage, too.

The paper also said bankers would be able to devote more time to the customer's "specialized needs, because less time will be needed to handle routine banking services."

The government apparently supports commercial banks' efforts to move the EFTS idea forward quickly. Starting in November, the Social Security Administration the Treasury Department and the Federal Reserve began a pilot program in Georgia in which

Social Security recipients may opt voluntarily to have their monthly checks sent directly to the bank of their choice.

The four Automated Clearing Houses now in existence have experienced similar start-up problems. Waage says: "Automated Clearing Houses are designed to benefit banks, but there are no benefits yet for the customer. So far, they've been a bust. A lot of people derive psychic pleasure from having their paycheck in hand."

He says one supposed benefit Automated Clearing House officials point to is the convenience of having banks pay utility bills automatically.

"But if you think I'm going to pay my Con Edison bill or phone bill without checking it first, you're nuts," Waage says.

Waage suggests that banks and employers who want to see EFTS get off the ground should begin giving concrete monetary and convenience incentives.

Equitable Life Insurance Co., for instance, has arrangements with policy holders permitting it to draw premiums directly from the holder's bank account. Equitable sweetened the offer by granting participants a discount on their insurance premiums.

There are other issues that apparently trouble consumers, according to consumer surveys for the ABA in 1970 and 1973 and another this year for the Virginia Bankers Association.

In a recent paper, Peter H. Schuck, Washington Director of Consumers Union, enumerated several:

—Control over personal finances. Under an EFTS arrangement, the consumer would no longer be able "to manipulate one's finances within broad limits, to determine what to pay when, and to exploit the benefits of float during the check-clearing process."

—Proof of payment. "The canceled check is a convenient and universally recognized proof of payment," Schuck says. "Indeed, so essential to consumer remedies is the canceled check as proof of payment that any EFTS that hopes to gain consumer acceptance will have to invent some substitute for it."

—Stopping payment. "The right of consumers to direct a stop payment order to a bank constitutes enormous leverage in their dealings with merchants, landlords and others with whom they do business," Schuck says. "Any acceptable EFTS will have to accommodate this well-established safeguard for consumers."

State expected to continue conservation panel

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The California Legislature probably will vote during its 1975-76 session to continue some form of the Coastal Zone Conservation Commission, the present commission chairman predicts.

"I think the odds are very good. I think there is public support for it," said Mel Lane, a Reagan appointee who once headed the San Francisco Bay Area Conservation and Development Commission.

In an interview here, Lane was generally positive about the commission, which was created when voters approved Prop. 20 on the November 1972 ballot.

Prop. 20, which set up one statewide and six regional commissions, sparked heated controversy. Developers said it would freeze construction. Conservationists backed it enthusiastically.

Its aim was to protect California's 1,087-mile shoreline from becoming overcrowded with subdivisions, hotels, parking lots, restaurants and other development.

The commissions were given a four-year veto power over coastline developments within 1,000 yards of the mean high-tide line. That power ends in December 1976. The commissions were also required to present a statewide coastal plan to the Legislature by January 1976.

Lane's contention is that Prop. 20 is working.

"It hasn't brought all the hardship developers said it would. We have made considerable access in gaining more public access to the beaches. We have done a good job protecting agricultural land," Lane said.

Not everyone, of course, sees the situation the way Lane does.

George C. Galvin, executive vice president of the Los Angeles-based Building Industry Association, said:

"The commissions have held down construction and caused some unemployment by not letting projects get off the ground. We could certainly use the projects that could be going."

Galvin added that in some instances commissions have caused unnecessary delays in projects that "are vitally needed on the coastline."

Lane countered that about three-fourths of permits are being approved outright, about 15 to 20 per cent approved with some kind of conditions and not more than 5 per cent rejected.

Along with gripes from developers, Prop. 20 prompts some conservationist criticism as well.

Janel Adams, chairwoman of the California Coastal Alliance that spearheaded the drive to win passage of Prop. 20, said she was dissatisfied with two regional commissions.

"It's very variable, but you can certainly damn some of the regional commissions. San Diego and the North Coast commissions have been a farce," Mrs. Adams said.

Overall, she praised the state commission, but faulted two of its 1974 decisions — approval of two nuclear power units at San Onofre and construction of homes at Sea Ranch on the Sonoma Coast.

Also, the commissions' work on a statewide land-use plan tends to favor developers, Mrs. Adams said.

Younger ruling costs Reagan a judicial choice

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger said Tuesday that Gov. Reagan cannot legally fill a Superior Court bench vacancy that will occur when he retires on Jan. 6.

The opinion by the Republican state official had the effect of giving Democratic Gov.-elect Edmund Brown Jr. two additional appointments to Superior Court judgeships.

At the same time Younger issued the opinion, Reagan announced the appointment of a new Superior Court judge in Santa Clara County. But the judge apparently may serve for only 13 days.

Younger told Reagan that a governor cannot name a successor to serve the term of a judge who left the bench after winning re-election but before starting his new term. The opinion was requested by Reagan.

The ruling reiterated an attorney general's opinion in 1959 sought by retiring Republican Gov. Goodwin Knight who had to leave similar appointments to newly elected Gov. Edmund Brown Sr.

Younger said that when a Superior Court judge re-elected in November retires, resigns or dies before the start of his new term, Reagan can name someone only "to fill the interim term." He concluded that Brown will be able to make the new appointment at the start of the new term, which falls on the same day Reagan leaves office.

To support his opinion, the attorney general cited a section of the state constitution which states "the governor shall appoint a person to fill the vacancy temporarily until the elected judge's term begins."

Reagan named Sunnyvale-Cupertino Municipal Court Judge James Wright to the Santa Clara County Superior Court bench. He will replace James Scott, who won re-election in November but later was elevated by Reagan to the 1st District Court of Appeal.

Under Younger's opinion, Brown can replace Wright on Jan. 6 or reappoint him to a full six-year term. Wright has been a municipal court judge since May, 1972.

In a second instance, Brown also can name a successor to Riverside Superior Court Judge Robert Dauber, who died last week after winning re-election in November.

4 talent agencies sued on false claims

United Press International

The state attorney general filed suit Tuesday to bar five persons and four agencies from using misleading statements to induce parents to sign talent contracts for their children.

The suit, filed in Los Angeles Superior Court by Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger, alleged that the individuals and agencies have engaged since January in a scheme to mislead parents into believing that they would help clients obtain employment in the advertising, modeling or entertainment industries.

Parents were told, the lawsuit charged, that for approximately $135 in fees, their children would earn a minimum of $15 to $55 an hour for regular print work and $165 daily plus residuals for television work.

However, the suit said, of approximately 9,000 children signed by the agencies, only 23 obtained employment in 28 different acting and modeling jobs for total earnings of $1,516.

The suit sought an injunction against the individuals and agencies and also asked civil penalties of $35,000.

Named in the action were Jerome Ashfield, Sanford Storm, William Schuler, Riva Glass, Ann Demeter, National Talent Associates, National Talent Associates of Northern California, the William Schuler Agency and the Demeter Agency.

Legislative programs in doubt for 1975

Uncertain economy is state's prime worry

By STEVE LAWRENCE
SACRAMENTO (AP) — California moves into 1975 with a new governor, a Democratic-controlled Legislature and a list of leftover problems dominated by a troubled and uncertain economy.

The state's unemployment rate reached 8.7 per cent in November, and many economists say it will go higher next year. That could mean reduced state revenues and a tough future for new spending programs wanted by Gov.-elect Edmund G. Brown Jr. and legislative leaders.

"I can think of 50 different programs that I would like to see initiated or expanded," said Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy. "But virtually none of them are going to be initiated if the economy keeps slipping badly."

VERNE ORR, Gov. Reagan's outgoing finance director, predicts the Democratic governor-elect can hold on to the state's $400 million budget surplus and avoid asking for new taxes this year if he keeps a tight rein on state expenditures.

"If he budgets very conservatively he can live within his revenues," Orr said. "There would be no room at all for new programs if he does that."

Brown said before Christmas that he thinks the state can get by without a tax increase next year.

But even with its economic woes, California can look forward to significant changes next year in the way it governs its lobbyists and regulates energy use and to passage of a flood of liberal legislation.

Prop. 9, the political reform initiative approved by voters Nov. 5, goes into effect Jan. 7, banning political contributions by lobbyists and putting a "two hamburgers and a Coke" limit on what they can spend on state officials and lawmakers.

LEGISLATION placing tough energy-conservation powers in the hands of a five-member commission takes effect Jan. 7. The measure will streamline power-plant siting procedures and give the commission power to set up insulation, lighting, design and climate-control standards for all new buildings.

Commissioners will also set minimum efficiency standards for major appliances.

"It's the major accomplishment of the Legislature this year," said Assemblyman Charles Warren, Los Angeles Democrat who introduced the bill.

California will also be able to use gasoline-tax funds for rapid-transit construction this year.

Next year may also see several measures made into law that died this year on Reagan's desk: bills that would cut penalties for marijuana possession, set up a low-interest housing-loan program, create a fulltime Air Resources Board, grant senior citizens additional property-tax relief and extend unemployment insurance to farm workers.

ALSO among the old problems the Legislature will face when it returns Jan. 8 will be public school financing and farm-labor unionization.

McCarthy says lawmakers could pass a farm-labor bill next year but he doubts if they will agree on an education-funding measure.

"I think secret-ballot elections for farm employees will become law sometime during the two-year session," he said. "It may well happen during 1975."

Cesar Chavez's United Farm Workers and the Teamsters Union, which have been battling for control of California farm workers, are backing opposing bills introduced when lawmakers met briefly in December.

Both measures provide for secret elections for farm workers, but the Teamster measure would ban contract-breaking efforts by another union and UFW-style secondary boycotts.

The Assembly passed a UFW bill this year, but it died in the Senate. Next year the author, Assemblyman Richard Alatorre, D-Los Angeles, thinks the measure's chances are better.

"I THINK the margin of success will be even larger in the Assembly," he said. "And the election of people like Alex Garcia, Jerry Smith and John Dunlap gives it a much better chance of being able to get out of the Senate."

The state is under a court order to balance out its education-funding system, which is based on a combination of local property taxes and state aid.

A Los Angeles Superior Court judge ruled in the landmark Serrano-Priest decision that use of local property taxes allows rich districts to spend more per pupil and thus violates the State Constitution's equal-protection clause.

State officials and legislators have since been debating ways to change the system, and McCarthy says he doubts if they will reach a decision next year.

"It's unrealistic," he said. "What I hope to do with the schools is improve them with some money to take care of inflation — to maintain current programs. Given the economy, we are not going to be able to respond to Serrano during 1975."

THERE WILL be hundreds of other measures introduced this year. Nearly 400 bills have already been introduced and will be eligible for committee hearings during January.

They include measures to protect pension plans, create a one-house legislature, ban campaign contributions from corporations and labor unions, and revamp the state's milk-pricing system.

Other bills would raise the gasoline tax, lower the drinking age, attempt to block oil drilling in federal coastal waters, and place a freeze on prime farm land.

Lawmakers may also replace a deposit on soft-drink bottles, wipe out bans against certain sex acts and abolish the state's oil-depletion allowance.

And they will also have a chance to say whether they will continue to meet in the state's 105-year-old Capitol or will build a new legislative home.

Sirhan 'hopeful, humble' in Christmas statement

Associated Press
Sirhan Bishara Sirhan issued a statement through his attorney Tuesday saying he is "filled with feelings of hope and humility" at Christmas in light of new public discussion of his case.

The statement by the convicted killer of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was released by attorney Godfrey Isaac who said he visited Sirhan at San Quentin Prison Monday. He said Sirhan asked him to issue this statement on Christmas Eve.

"I am grateful for the interest being shown in my case. If I had any consciousness of the events of June, 1968, it would not have taken this long to develop evidence pointing toward my innocence of killing Senator Kennedy. I am filled with feelings of hope and humility and that I may someday soon have my freedom. At this season I wish peace for the entire world."

Sirhan's comment about his consciousness of events during his trial that he had diminished mental capacity at the time of Kennedy's shooting. His attorneys portrayed him as "a sick man" who was in a trance at the time of the killing and had no control over his will or judgment. However, Sirhan testified that he killed Kennedy at Los Angeles Ambassador Hotel following a Democratic primary victory celebration.

In recent weeks speculation has been renewed concerning the possibility of a conspiracy with extra bullets and another gun involved. Former New York Democratic congressman Allard Lowenstein stated last week that he does not believe Sirhan is the murderer of Kennedy.

However, Los Angeles Dist. Atty. Joseph P. Busch has declined to reopen the Sirhan case saying the evidence that Sirhan acted alone is "absolutely overwhelming." He said he would not object to a court investigation of the matter.

Isaac has said he will file a writ with the State Supreme Court asking for a new trial for Sirhan on the basis of new evidence.

'Commuter bandit' suspect gives up

SAN JOSE (UPI) — Gaylord W. Anguish, 32, the suspected "commuter bandit" who police said flew from his mountain chalet in California to Long Island and robbed at least five banks, was arraigned Tuesday before a U.S. magistrate.

He had been the object of an intense manhunt after FBI agents and local law enforcement authorities swept in on Anguish's secluded home in the Santa Cruz Mountains Dec. 17. He escaped out the back by leaping into the woods from a veranda, leaving a washing machine running in the house, agents said.

Anguish eluded search parties for one week, then quietly turned himself in to FBI agent Joseph Chiamonte in San Jose Tuesday night. The surrender followed "considerable negotiation and contact between our office for several days," an FBI spokesman said.

Although suspected of at least five bank robberies, he was charged specifically with the $8,390 holdup last June of the Bankers Trust of Suffolk County in Commack, N.Y.

Anguish would tell friends he was flying to New York to sell stock when he made his transcontinental flights for the purpose of holding up banks, the FBI said.

Suffolk County authorities said Anguish was identified as a suspect in the bank robberies as a result of a bank camera photograph published in newspapers.

An employee of a car rental firm recognized the picture as that of a man who rented cars under the name of Anguish, and police said the dates of the car rentals corresponded with those of the bank robberies.

The cars were rented with a credit card belonging to Helen Hebron, 63, identified by police as Anguish's mother.

Authorities went to her home Dec. 16 in Greenlawn, L.I., but police said she refused to answer their questions. They charged her with obstructing governmental administration.

A day later FBI agents and local authorities went to Anguish's secluded chalet in California, but he escaped into the densely wooded area and remained at large until his surrender.

Coal truckers OK cooling-off period

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Drivers for western Pennsylvania coal-hauling truckers agreed Tuesday to remain on the job during a 60-day "cooling-off" period.

A spokesman for the Western Pennsylvania Coal Haulers Association said the truckers proposed the cooling-off period and it was agreed to by the drivers, members of the United Mine Workers.

JUDGE BARS PICKETING

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Robert H. Schnake issued a temporary restraining order Tuesday to prevent picketing in a jurisdictional labor dispute at Oakland facilities of SeaTrain Lines and American President Lines.

The order, issued upon petition of the National Labor Relations Board, forbade picketing or threats of picketing by Carpenters Local 1199 and Ship Painters Local 961.

The two locals are involved in a dispute with the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union over the right to perform maintenance work on cargo containers.

The judge set Friday for a hearing.

Oklahoma suspect jailed in San Diego

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — A suspect in the summer abduction and slaying of a young Oklahoma City woman has been arrested in San Diego, Calif., police said Tuesday.

Judy Webb, 19, was shot to death and her companion, Karen Trantham, 24, was shot and left for dead after both were abducted in their own car from a parking lot Aug. 3.

The suspect is a 21-year-old former Oklahoma City man, police said. Detectives Bob Jackson and Bill Snipes accompanied the Trantham woman to San Diego Monday to continue the investigation, Sgt. Russell Riggsby said.

No more confusion for parents

'New new' math adds basics

By MAC BOWE
Our State Bureau
CARMEL VALLEY—
Now there's a "new new" math.

The new new math sounds familiar to those who grew up with such terms as "addition" and "multiplication."

It has a strong foundation in drill and concerns itself with the four basic functions of mathematics.

Gone are such mind-twisting terms as "distributive property" and "commutative property." Parents will be delighted when they realize they can understand what their children and the teachers are talking about.

Nor is there any need for them to go to school to learn what their children are being taught. To say that the new new math is simply a return to the old math is wrong, however.

"We have taken the best of the new and the old systems and combined them to produce a third generation," said a spokesman for Science Research Associates (SRA), the firm that developed the new approach.

Rev. Stanley J. Bezuska, a Jesuit priest and one of the authors of the system, says:

"We've simplified the language, returned it to drills and introduced the pupil to mathematics in realistic situations."

Bezuska stresses, however, that the monotony of learning the multiplication tables by rote has been changed to learning them in realistic situations "enough different ways and enough times so the pupil is indeed memorizing the tables but is not aware of it."

Bezuska, here for the California Mathematics Council's recent three-day conference, visited Tularcitos School in Carmel Valley.

This fall the elementary school adopted the SRA method.

Bezuska showed techniques in a kindergarten class here. He uses finger counting, coins, blocks—just about anything that comes to hand.

"Why not count on fingers?" he asked. "Fingers were man's first abacus."

He approaches mathematics in a down-to-earth manner.

"First, there is the necessity of knowing the four fundamental operations of mathematics. Memorizing them is the only way we can do it."

"Then, once we've memorized them we can learn the properties and the concepts of these operations."

"What we're doing is disguising rote memorization as interesting realistic situations."

Textbooks contain a series of self-evaluation tests that help teachers determine just how well a pupil is grasping a function.

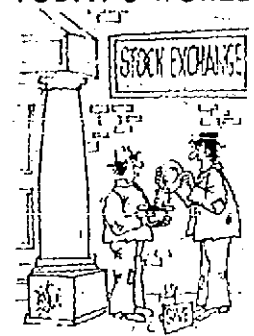

The books are filled with cartoons, pictures of pies and yes—even apples and oranges.

$400,000 in heroin found on seaman

ELIZABETH, N.J. (AP)—A crewman on a ship from Hong Kong was arrested Tuesday when he allegedly tried to smuggle two pounds of pure heroin, worth $400,000, into the country while on shore leave, authorities said.

U.S. Atty. Jonathan L. Goldstein said Po Lee of Hong Kong was arrested by the U.S. Customs Patrol as he left the ship Taeha, a commercial vessel unloading at Port Elizabeth.

TODAY'S WORLD

"Small change advanced but dollar bills declined."

8 major U.S. programs in space asked

WASHINGTON (UPI)—National Academy of Sciences advisers have recommended the U.S. space agency start eight major new programs in space physics, astronomy and planetary and lunar exploration during the next two fiscal years, it was learned Tuesday.

In its first major space research policy decision since 1970, the academy's Space Science Board said the ultimate objective for unmanned spacecraft should be to have them return planetary samples to earth for detailed laboratory analysis.

Only the Soviet Union has sent an unmanned spacecraft to another celestial body—the moon—to gather and return samples.

Kids badly injured copying Knievel, parents warned

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Five-year-old Ricky, in Batavia, Ill., tried an Evel Knievel-type jump with his bicycle and fractured the roof of his mouth.

Ten-year-old Kenneth of Chicago tried to ride his bike up a ramp, a-la-Skycycle II, and suffered a knee injury that cost his parents $2,500.

These are some examples Rep. John M. Murphy, D-N.Y., said Tuesday he has found of children injured trying to emulate the stunt-motorcyclist.

"He warned parents, 'If you gave your youngsters Evel Knievel gifts for Christmas, watch them closely. There have been millions of Evel Knievel toys sold. With the Knievel Canyon jump-fresh in their minds, I would like to prevent as many injuries as possible which might result from imaginative youngsters who attempt to imitate their hero's daredevil exploits.'"

Murphy said he had a survey done that found 57 hospital cases in which injuries "were Evel-inspired."

Murphy tried unsuccessfully to block the broadcast of Knievel's Sept. 8 attempt to rocket a stylized motorcycle across the Snake River Canyon.

Murphy said he wishes

news media had ignored the jump, which failed.

Since then, he said, youngsters made Knievel a playtime hero. All over the country, they were trying to match the jump in their own way, on tricycles and bicycles, Murphy said.

He said the survey turned up two cases in which children were in the hospital six weeks, one with a broken femur and the other with a ruptured liver.

Murphy said the National Association of Children's Hospitals did the survey.

SOUTHLAND MOVIE GUIDE

THE FRONT PAGE—An hilarious new production of the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur play about cynical Chicago newspapermen of the late 20s with Jack Lemmon as an ace reporter and Walter Matthau, in a fine performance, as his editor. (PG)

THE TOWERING INFERNO—A suspenseful drama about a massive blaze that has trapped persons high in a skyscraper. With Steve McQueen, Paul Newman, William Holden and Faye Dunaway. (PG)

THE MAN WITH THE GOLDEN GUN—Roger Moore stars as 007 agent James Bond on a Far East chase after the evil Scaramanga who has a $1 million contract on his life. With Christopher Lee and Britt Ekland. (PG)

PHANTOM OF THE PARADISE—Composer Paul Williams in an entertaining satire of the music industry with shades of "Phantom of the Opera" and Faust. (PG)

GODFATHER II—A stunning sequel. Robert DeNiro (outstanding) as the hoarse-voiced young Sicilian who becomes the crime family Godfather in early 1900s New York, and Al Pacino as the dangerously troubled heir overlord. With Lee Strasberg and Robert Duvall. (R)

AIRPORT '75—Inspired by "Airport," a suspense drama involving a crippled 747 airliner. With Charlton Heston, Karen Black, and Gloria Swanson. (PG)

THE LONGEST YARD—Burt Reynolds portrays an ex-pro quarterback in a fast-paced, gag-filled action drama directed by Robert Aldrich. (R)

THE ISLAND AT THE TOP OF THE WORLD—A Disney adventure about arctic explorers in 1907 who find an unknown land inhabited by lost Vikings. With David Hartman. (G)

THE STING—Excellent. Funny, suspenseful and at times touching as 1930s con men Robert Redford and Paul Newman set up the elaborate swindle of rackets chief Robert Shaw. (PG)

DOCTOR ZHIVAGO—Omar Shariff, Julie Christie, Rod Taylor and Geraldine Chaplin in the film version of Boris Pasternak's novel probing the turbulent effects of the Russian Revolution. Winner of six Oscars. (PG)

HARRY AND TONTO—A heartwarming, delightful sketch of life starring Art Carney in a masterful performance as a retired professor who lives with an unusual cat. (R)

THE GAMBLER—Critics choice for dynamic study of the species and a fine performance by James Caan as the leading character. (R)

"You know, Lou Lehr used to say, 'Monkeys is the cwaziest people' and film-maker Jaimie Uys spent four years and a half million feet of film just proving that all the animals and birds are delicious characters, funny people, sad people, greedy people, vicious people, even drunken people. They are all in this panoramic and very cleverly edited movie about the wild life of Africa with appropriate music and very little commentary. It may indeed be nominated for an Academy Award but it is wonderful entertainment for the whole family, especially animal people."

Competition up for student aid

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Competition for California state scholarships will be tougher this year because the slumping economy has prompted a sharp increase in applications, an official said.

"We're going to have to turn down a lot of students," said Arthur Marmaduke, director of the State Scholarship and Loan Commission.

He said 61,000 high school seniors, an increase of 42 per cent, have applied for the 13,500 available scholarships. Last year there were 43,000 applications and 13,200 grants totaling $32.5 million, Marmaduke said.

"WE THINK it's a recession psychology, a feeling that the future economically is uncertain and you need help to pay those college bills," he said. "We assume that there are more middle-income families applying."

The tuition scholarships are given, for education in California, to 4.25 per cent of the state's graduating high school seniors on the basis of grades, test scores and financial need.

Students at private schools can receive up to $2,500 a year, depending on their families' incomes. University of California students get up to $600 a year, state college students up to $180.

MARMADUKE said last year's recipients averaged 3.3, or B-plus, out of a possible 4.0 in high school grades and scored in the top half on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, a college entrance examination.

He said this year's winners will need higher marks, but wouldn't say how much higher.

Applications for the state's College Opportunity Grant program have increased at least 33 per cent, Marmaduke said.

The $7-million program offers 3,100 grants up to $900 for low-income and minority students. Marmaduke said there were 12,800 applications last year and 17,000 so far this year with some still uncounted.

HE SAID another reason for the increase in applications is a new UC rule requiring students seeking aid from the university to apply for state scholarships as well.

In addition, financial standards have been loosened somewhat, allowing some aid for families with several children at private colleges and incomes of as much as $25,000 a year, Marmaduke said.

Newton a fugitive, Seale 'retired'

Woman assumes leadership of Black Panthers

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Black Panther Party enters the new year with a slender 31-year-old heir to the mantle of leadership because one founder is a fugitive and the second has apparently abdicated.

Elaine Brown, educated in a primarily white, upper-class Philadelphia area high school, has emerged from the shadows of political theorist Huey Newton and the fiery Bobby Seale.

Newton is in hiding, accused of murder and assault. Seale is living in Los Angeles and makes no effort to speak for the Panthers.

Ms. Brown served for many years as the Black Panther minister of information and, to observers, appeared to rank third in the political structure, behind Newton and Seale.

This week she announced her candidacy for a seat on the Oakland City Council, downplaying her affiliation with the Panthers and making it clear she is not running strictly as a Panther candidate.

"I'm a lot of other things beside a Black Panther," Ms. Brown said. "I want to broaden my political base." The Panthers "as well as other groups throughout the community are supporting my candidacy."

She and Seale ran unsuccessfully for elective offices two years ago. Seale sought the mayorship of Oakland and Ms. Brown a seat on the city council. She captured 33 per cent of the vote.

In announcing her candidacy again, Ms. Brown said:

"I know that the third district needs real representation, for the incumbent representative, Raymond Eng, has failed to advocate programs for the people of West Oakland and Chinatown, or even to display serious concern for any of our problems."

As a child, Ms. Brown attended Thaddeus Stevens School in Philadelphia, where her classmates were the children of the upper intellectual-social strata. But after school she would return to the sparse home kept by her mother in the city's black ghetto.

"I was raised in a home without a father until I was 16. I lived with my mother and was raised to be a very independent person."

She entered a high school rated tenth in the nation academically," Ms. Brown said.

"Our high school was unbelievably bourgeois. We even sang our school song in Latin. I studied five years of Latin and I even took fencing."

After high school she attended Temple University for 18 months, but dropped out for financial reasons.

She moved to Los Angeles in 1967, settling near Watts, where she saw the massive riots and worked as a cocktail waitress.

Ms. Brown began writing for a paper called the Black Congress and met Bunchy Carter, a strong advocate of black power.

"He had come from the streets and was forming a chapter of the Black Panthers in L.A.," she said. "Early in 1968 I joined and I knew then that I would devote my life to the cause."

Carter and another Panther, John Huggins, died in a shooting on the UCLA campus on Jan. 17, 1969, victims of a power struggle between the Panthers and another black group called US.

"I knew my life was on the line," she said. "Panthers were being killed all over the country but mostly in Los Angeles."

Ms. Brown came to Oakland in 1971 to edit the Black Panther newspaper and serve as the party's spokesman.

Cal. needs bonds to bar hotels

STATELINE, Nev. (UPI) — California must come up with $3.5 million in bonds by Friday or construction on two much debated hotel-casinos near Stateline can go ahead, according to attorney for the projects.

A spokesman for the U.S. Court of Appeals in San Francisco said the deadline was set by Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas.

Douglas said in an order that, unless the bonds are posted, a federal ban on the construction of the Tahoe Palace and Hotel Oliver will be terminated.

Douglas modified an earlier order on the bonds issued by Reno Federal Judge Bruce Thompson.

Oliver Kahle's $40 million hotel and Ted Jennings $42 million project were sued by the State of California after they gained approval by the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency.

California officials argued that construction of the two hotels would irreparably damage the California side of the Tahoe Basin.

Thompson issued the bond order to delay possible damage to the developers should the state later lose the case.

RCA, mart showdown averted

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A legal showdown between RCA Distributing Corp. and Fedmart Corp., San Diego, over fair trade pricing on RCA television sets was averted Tuesday when RCA dropped plans to mark up prices in San Diego and Imperial counties.

RCA announced Dec. 11 it was going to enforce fair trade pricing in the two counties while dealers in the state's 56 other counties could sell sets at any price they wished.

The effect of the RCA decision here was to boost the cost of some sets as much as $200. Fedmart immediately announced it would not raise its prices and challenged RCA to go to court on the matter.

RCA cited "legal problems" in dropping its fair trade plans. The state's fair trade laws allow manufacturers and distributors to establish minimum prices their products may sell for.

Fedmart President Sol Price, in full page newspaper ads, called the action "discriminatory." He said the RCA decision Tuesday was "good news" but said he hoped the state Attorney General "still goes after them."

CHRISTMAS IS FOR KIDS... unless, of course, the new toy under the Christmas tree happens to be an elaborate electric train. Then, it's Dad's day—at least for Richard Cisneros of Rossmore. Here, 4-year-old Jon Joseph Cisneros looks wistfully over his father's shoulder and wonders if his turn will ever come. But Pop seems reluctant to give up his spot so it may be a while before Jon gets a chance to play with his present.

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

QUESTIONS THAT occur as I attempt to remove a gray spot from my new Christmas tie:

Why does a water heater choose to conk out when plumbers go on double overtime?

How did Judge John Sirica find three doctors who were willing to make a house call?

Who finds all those pounds that are lost by people in health spa ads?

Is it true that a movie becomes a film when it plays an art house?

Without his toupee, wouldn't Howard Cosell be known as the Bald Ego?

What is less permanent than a permanent wave? Political promises?

Is it true that the Ford-Giscard meeting on Martini was known as the "spaghetti summit" because it was Franco-American?

Isn't it true that all President Ford needs to solve the oil crisis is a fair sheik?

Who says talk's cheap, when every time a politician opens his mouth it costs the taxpayers money?

How could a man who knew the congressional ropes trip over a G-string and fall on his Fanne?

IF YOU HAVE the correct answer to the questions posed, you are entitled to an all-expense-paid walk to the nearest supermarket—before the prices change.

The consolation prize is a set of burglar tools for use in prying open the "easy open" cereal boxes that bedevil you at breakfast. I'm assuming you have an appetite in the morning after reading about stock market declines, unemployment, steel price hikes, crime, violence, etc.

I feel the same way. The only reason I try to laugh is because it hurts too much to cry. Perhaps that is the saving grace of America—a sense of humor.

The youngster on the hospital ship in 1945 had no reason to make jokes. His left leg was gone. So was hope of returning to the football team at a small college in Ohio.

"Maybe I should be bitter about the war," the boy said. "But considering how many guys we left back there, I've only got half a kick coming."

I remember my Uncle John Morris, who kept the D.S.C. in a small leather case in his bureau drawer and the scars of mustard gas on what was left of his lungs. In the several Depression years before he found employment as a warehouseman, he was often a supper-time visitor, lingering afterward to help me with my homework.

One scholastic exercise involved arithmetic with apples. The question went something like this:

"If you have 12 apples and give four to a friend, how many apples do you have left?"

"YOU HAVE eight apples left," said Uncle John. Or put it this way: enough apples to set up business on the corner opposite mine."

Uncle John had personal experience with apples and veterans and pain. But the reality of a depression never warped his hope. It was there along with his sense of humor when prosperity finally returned.

If it comes to apples, I'm ready, Uncle John. You showed the way home.

Housing funds hearings set

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

Five public meetings are scheduled next month to explain the federal Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 and to get ideas from residents on how Long Beach should spend the estimated $10 million it will get in federal housing funds the next three years.

The public hearings were arranged this week at a meeting of a subcommittee of the city's Citizens Advisory Committee on Community Improvement, which has agreed to sponsor the educational campaign.

The subcommittee, which consists of Paul McKenzie Jr., Lael Hughes, Henry Taboada and Deborah Hill, announced the following meetings:

—Monday, Jan. 13, at Lindbergh Junior High School, 1022 E. Market St.

—Tuesday, Jan. 14, at Temple Sinai, 2600 E. Seventh St.

—Thursday, Jan. 16, at Garfield Elementary School, 2240 Baltic Ave.

—Monday, Jan. 20, at

Franklin Junior High School, 340 Cerritos Ave.

—Wednesday, Jan. 22, at California Recreation Center, 1550 California Ave.

The meetings start at 7 p.m. and all residents of Long Beach are invited.

Questionnaires will ask those attending to rate the importance, in their opinion, of a number of subjects under the general headings of neighborhood needs, citywide needs, public-social service needs and housing needs.

President Ford signed the Housing and Community Development Act last Aug. 22, the first omnibus housing bill in six years. In one program alone, the Community Development Block Grant Program, the act authorizes $8.4 billion over a three-year period.

THIS program, explained Ray Brosterhouse, director of community development for the city, provides 100 per cent federal grants, with no matching funds requirement, to local governments for community development and related activities.

Rules liberalized for those who would address L.B. school board

A policy change that will allow persons who want to address the Long Beach Board of Education to give shorter advance notice was approved Monday.

Superintendent W. Odie Wright, who recommended the change, said that the new guidelines had been under consideration for several months.

The old rules had been criticized by representatives of some citizens groups and teacher groups who held that no advance notice should be required.

Guest speakers at board meetings now must file a written request at the school superintendent's office, 701 Locust Ave., by noon of the day of the board meeting, usually Mondays. They can then talk 10 minutes.

The board's previous policy was that anyone applying to address the board must make their request—in writing or by telephone—by 10 a.m. the Friday before Monday meetings.

However, the liberalized policy applies only to persons who want to speak on items on the board's agenda for that meeting. Speakers on other subjects must still meet the earlier deadline.

Board Chairman Jerald S. Jacobs said the purpose of the early-notice rule was to "give staff members time to prepare to respond" to guest speakers.

However, under an "emergency clause" in board policy, visitors can speak during the board's conference period—before the regular board meeting—on subjects "already under consideration." Remarks must be limited to three minutes each.

Despite the Board's written policy, board chairmen have tended recently to allow visitors to speak on agenda topics at any time during the conference period.

Controversy over the board's speaker policy arose last spring when Vice Chairman James Gray ruled a teacher's aide out of order when she attempted to speak.

The aide, Lee Alvarez, said she had new information to present on why teacher aides should get pay raises, but Gray said her application to speak was rejected on grounds she had was going to cover old material.

To solve zoning problem

Cherry Manor survey ordered

A survey of all 222 homes in Cherry Manor to "see what the people really want" to solve the problem of "incompatibility" between residential and industrial zoning in the area was ordered Tuesday by the Long Beach City Council.

The survey by the city manager's office was proposed by Councilman Russell Rubley, who said he is "not sure" that Frank H. Arundel, 2263 E. 63rd St., chairman of Cherry Manor Homeowners Association, represents the feeling of the area.

Rubley's comment came after a letter was read from the Los Angeles County Air Pollution Control District, saying that the 430 complaints it had received from February, 1973, through Aug. 27, 1974, came from "relatively few" residents of Cherry Manor—and that 45 per cent came from Arundel or his wife.

Nine individuals in Cherry Manor accounted for 84 per cent of all complaints received in 1974, the APCD said in its letter to Long Beach City Prosecutor Robert Parkin.

It said there "undoubtedly are low-level odors" occurring occasionally in the industrial area which surrounds Cherry Manor, but added, "we do not believe the odors are of sufficient intensity or duration to constitute a public nuisance."

Councilmen asked City Manager John R. Mansell to bring in results of his survey in 30 days, if this is possible.

Mansell had submitted a report to the council in which he offered six alternative courses of action—ranging from doing nothing about the problem to rezoning Cherry Manor from residential to industrial, or considering the area for a redevelopment project.

Mansell asked Arundel if he could suggest any other possible courses of action, but Arundel said he had no suggestions at that time.

Arundel challenged Mansell's report that all industries in the area are operating under proper permits, saying he had been told the city permits were issued for refinery construction. The city manager said, however, that high-pressure boilers and similar facilities of oil refineries are under state control, and get state permits.

Weather satellite assembled in Cal.

By BOB GEIVET

A sleek "weather watch" space satellite, part of which was built at Newport Beach, will be launched in late January to monitor the world's weather.

Known as a Synchronous Meteorological Satellite-B (SMS-2)—because it will be the second such weather observer—it will be shipped Dec. 28 from Ford-Philco Corporation's Western Development Laboratories in Palo Alto, where it was assembled, to Florida for launching. Aeronutronic at Newport Beach supplied much of the equipment for the satellite.

The weather satellite is slightly more than 6 feet in diameter and 9 feet long; it weighs 1,385 pounds with its boost motor and will weigh 635 pounds when the booster is dropped.

The craft will be in synchronous orbit, meaning it will be in the same basic orbit as the first such satellite, which is anchored over the Equator in line with New York.

The new satellite is to be followed by a third weather watcher, scheduled for launch in mid-1975.

The weather watchers are equipped to transmit weather photos every 30 minutes to receiving stations on earth.

The first one, riding at 75 degrees west longitude, covers the eastern United States and Atlantic Ocean. The second satellite, at 135 degrees west longitude, will cover the western states, Hawaiian Islands and the Pacific Ocean.

statement that all industries in the area adjacent to Cherry Manor are operating in proper zones, with required permits and meet fire and safety standards.

Carlton Wetzell, who owns the house at 2243 McKenzie St., said the "crux of the whole problem is incompatible zoning." He said he personally favored Mansell's first alternative, that Cherry Manor be rezoned from R-1 residential to M-2 industrial use.

Mrs. Arundel suggested that a member of the Cherry Manor Homeowners Association be permitted to review the questions to be asked in the city manager's survey of residents and be present at the interviews, suggesting questions might be "slanted."

The first Christmas

The Nativity according to St. Luke; the Jerusalem Bible

Now at this time Caesar Augustus issued a decree for a census of the whole world to be taken. This census — the first — took place while Quirinius was governor of Syria, and everyone went to his own town to be registered.

So Joseph set out from the town of Nazareth in Galilee and traveled up to Judea, to the town of David called Bethlehem, since he was of David's House and line, in order to be registered together with Mary, his betrothed, who was with child. While they were there the time came for her to have her child, and she gave birth to a son, her first-born.

She wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger because there was no room for them at the inn. In the countryside close by there were shepherds who lived in the fields and took it in turns to watch their flocks during the night. The angel of the Lord appeared to them and the glory of the Lord shone around them.

They were terrified, but the angel said, "Do not be afraid. Listen, I bring you news of great joy, a joy to be shared by the whole people. Today in the town of David a savior has been born to you; he is Christ the Lord. And here is a sign for you: you will find a baby wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger." And suddenly with the angel there was a great throng of the heavenly host, praising God and singing:

Glory to God in the highest heaven, and peace to men who enjoy his favor."

Now when the angels had gone from them into heaven, the shepherds said to one another, "Let us go to Bethlehem and see this thing that has happened which the Lord has made known to us." So they hurried away and found Mary and Joseph, and the baby lying in the manger.

When they saw the child they repeated what they had been told about him, and everyone who heard it was astonished at what the shepherds had to say. As for Mary, she treasured all these things and pondered them in her heart. And the shepherds went back glorifying and praising God for all they had heard and seen; it was exactly as they had been told.

Christmas

(George Herbert)

All after pleasures as I ride one day,
My horse and I, both tired, body and mind,
With full cry of affections, quite astray;
I took up in the next inn I could find.

There when I came, whom found I but my dear,
My dearest Lord, expecting till the grief
Of pleasures brought me to him, ready there
To be all passengers' most sweet relief?

O Thou, whose glorious, yet contracted light,
Wrapped in night's mantle, stole into a manger;
Since my dark soul and brutish is thy right.
To Man of all beasts be not thou a stranger:

Furnish and deck my soul, that thou mayst have A better lodging than a rack or grave.

The shepherds sing; and shall I silent be?
My God, no hymn for thee?

My soul's a shepherd too; a flock it feeds
Of thoughts, and words, and deeds.

The pasture is thy word: the streams thy grace
Enriching all the place.

Shepherd and flock shall sing, and all my powers
Out-sing the day-light hours.

Then we will chide the sun for letting night
Take up his place and right:

We sing one common Lord; wherefore he should Himself the candle hold.

I will go searching till I find a sun
Shall stay, till we have done;

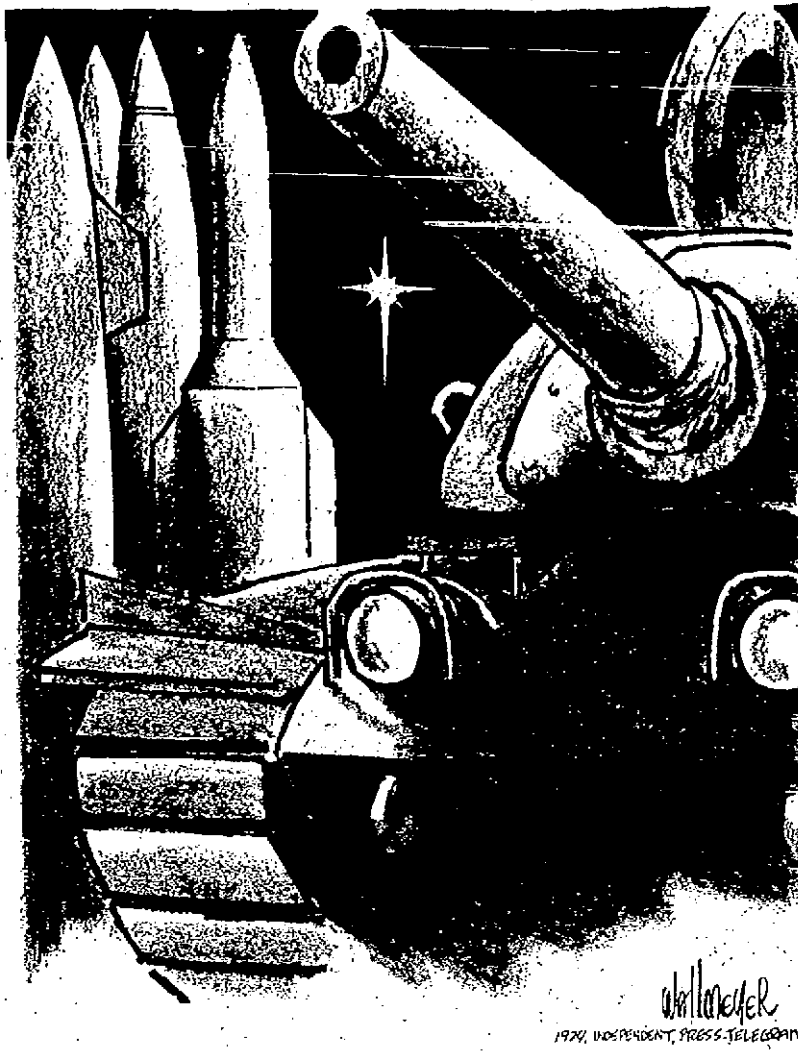

A willing shiner, that shall shine as gladly,
As frost-nipped suns look sadly.

Then we will sing, and shine all our own day,
And one another pay:

His beams shall cheer my breast, and both so twine
Till even his beams sing, and my music shine.

"All he wants to do is stack up the batteries!"

A Christmas wish

Angels announced the birth of Jesus as "Tidings of Great Joy." Christians share this joy on Christmas.

No one can fully comprehend Jesus' profound teachings which cover human experience. Emerson said, "Jesus Christ saw the mystery of the soul... alone in all history. He estimated the greatness of man."

Jesus' admonition to Peter to forgive seventy times seven is basic to Christianity, and is in keeping with His statement that the two greatest commandments are that we must love God with all our hearts, souls and minds, and our neighbors as ourselves. Love and forgiveness run like angelic harmony throughout the Gospels, and especially in these Beatitudes: "Blessed are the merciful for they shall receive mercy," "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God," and "Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the children of God." Christians can measure spiritual progress by the extent we exorcise hatred and condemnation.

Reinhold Niebuhr said that loving one's enemies is a "possible impossibility" with an act of Grace. Dr. Rollo May said that without Grace loving one's enemies becomes a moralistic effort of will.

Ireland's President Erskine Childers died in November. When he was 17, his father, an Englishman, was captured running guns for the Irish. Permitted to see his son for five minutes before execution, the father said, "Promise me you will never feel hatred or resentment." President Childers said he followed this advice. Christians have always thirsted to know more about Jesus' Divine Wisdom and His earthly life. Archbishop Fulton Sheen has said Jesus received all His earthly nature from a devout Jewish maid. Jesus was reared in a God-fearing home and nurtured on the Old Testament, which is an integral part of Christian training.

The ideals of the Judeo-Christian Scriptures are deeply imbedded in government, law, and all aspects of western civilization.

AS THE United States approaches its bicentennial, its most noteworthy accomplishment is that this is one nation under God, and that our Constitution has the inspired First Amendment, which states that Congress must not establish a national religion, or restrict freedom of religion or speech, or peaceful assembly, or the people's right to ask the government to right wrongs.

George Bernard Shaw, an unbeliever, said, "After observing public life for sixty years, I see no way out but Jesus' way if He were in public life." That is what President Washington did.

Our War for Independence would probably have been lost without Washington. He wrote and spoke often of his trust in Divine Providence. A man of spotless integrity, hidden fire, and intrepid faith, he retained the trust of the men of genius around him, and of the people, even at Valley Forge.

Our Christmas wish is that our hearts shall be filled with compassionate love for all humanity, and that we of the Christian community shall remember Jesus' words, "I am the way, the truth, and the life."

Press favors Israel

EDITOR:

Your editorial "Stereotypes of Arabs" correctly asserts that "the press and the schools should do more to provide Americans with a clear picture of the Arab states." Yet no group has done more to mislead and corrupt American thinking about the Arabs than the U.S. press.

A study of newspaper cartoons over the past eight years has revealed a presentation of Arabs in much the same terms that Jews were portrayed during the Hitler period in Germany. The stereotype fits your editorial description: dirty, dishonest, greedy, backward, scheming, big-nosed brutes.

Newspaper letters to editors, except for an occasional token piece, are generally closed to communications designed to correct misinformation and outright myths about the Arab-Israel conflict.

From the New York Times to the Los Angeles Times, from the Long Beach Independent, Press-Telegram to Long Island dailies, the slanting and anti-Arab bigotry is documented heavily. Little wonder that Americans, conditioned by Big Lies for years, with little chance to read corrective information, believe that Israel is a democracy, that supporting her is in the best interests of the United States, that Jews have a greater right to Palestine than the Palestinian Arabs, that Israel is a bulwark against the Soviets which the Arab states are not, and that Jews are humane while the Arabs are terrorists.

We are tired, too, of the editorial favoritism accorded the Israeli story at the expense of the Arab refugees, and the discrediting and misrepresentation at the hands of well-fed U.S. media leaders catering to Zionists.

By such subtleties as position of the stories in the newspaper, weighting of the emphases, and loaded words, papers have contributed to creating unwholesome stereotypes of the Arab peoples. Giving the impression that most of our oil problems are Arab-created — when major difficulties beyond embargoes are posed by Iran, Canada, Venezuela and other non-Arab states — adds to newspaper world guilt.

Head off the parade

EDITOR:

I don't particularly care which side is right or wrong in the General Brown controversy, but I categorically condemn the reference to the Irish.

Whether the Irish do not own the New York Times or once lived in shanties is totally irrelevant. Abe Lincoln never owned a newspaper and was born in a cabin. So what!

I ask the parties to refrain from using the Irish in their discussion. Otherwise we can expect a massive parade, the policing of which will add to our already astronomical tax rolls.

Balancing the checks

EDITOR:

Three cheers for Herr Kurt von Thadeus. He "knows" the three branches of government are CBS, NBC and ABC.

Doesn't he know we have a government of checks and balances?

He only mentioned the checks. May I add the balances. They are BOA, CHM AND NCB (Bank of America, Chase Manhattan and National City Bank of New York).

If he knows who owns the New York Times; he most certainly knows the owners of the Los Angeles Times, the Hearst newspapers and the Knight-Ridder newspapers.

Honeymoon is over at Douglas

Several months ago, according to an engineer at Douglas Aircraft Co., workers at the Long Beach plant took up a collection to buy a birthday gift for "Old Man McDonnell" — the chairman of the board of McDonnell Douglas Corp. (the parent company of Douglas Aircraft Co.) and the man widely regarded as the dominant figure in the firm's executive hierarchy.

It suggests something of the deepening rift that is taking place between workers and management at Douglas that, only a few weeks ago, in an incident of a far different nature, Sanford McDonnell was hanged in effigy by a group of employees at the plant.

REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

TO LEADERS of the United Auto and Aerospace Workers Union, which represents the vast majority of union-affiliated workers at the Long Beach facility, it is now apparent that what was once a relatively harmonious, if not perfect, marriage between labor and management at Douglas, has become an abrasive, and mutually suspicious relationship that is teetering on the brink of divorce.

As one worker put it, "the honeymoon is over." And few observers, including those on management's side, are inclined to disagree. It's generally acknowledged that under the late Donald Douglas and later his son, Donald Jr., there was a "closeness" between management and labor, as one company official put it, that seemed paternal in many respects.

"DONALD DOUGLAS and his son were much easier to deal with," says Douglas Griffith, a spokesman for UAW Local 148. "And the workers felt a certain pride in being part of the organization. Today they feel alienated from management, and many of them blame Sanford McDonnell personally for the entire mess we're in."

Which explains perhaps why the effigy that was hanged in Building 54 the other week was not that of James Brizendine, the president of Douglas, but Sanford McDonnell, the man many believe to be pulling the strings for Douglas Aircraft Co. in the current contract dispute — a dispute, incidentally, that has proved to be as mystifying as it is different from past negotiations.

The mystery lies principally in Douglas' uncharacteristically tough attitude. In the five months that Douglas officials have been negotiating with the UAW, in fact, the Long Beach plant (which was acquired by McDonnell in 1967) has become the setting for a curious war of nerves.

FROM ALL appearances, Douglas seem to be using every measure short of an indefinite lockout — including the threat of one — to get its workers out on the street. Its most widely publicized move, before the current shutdown, was its decision to withhold Christmas pay checks from its union employees at the plant (as well as at other McDonnell Douglas plants in Southern California).

Beyond that, the company has engaged in what can only be described as an all-out propaganda war, sending out bulletins and letters to its employees in an unprecedented stream in an effort to present its case directly to the workers.

As the union sees it, of course, the campaign has all the earmarks of an effort to divide and conquer: to set worker against worker and worker against union. To the extent that a number of workers have been disaffected with the union, the effort appears to have succeeded, although it remains to be seen how successful it will be in the long run. For what may have been a potentially serious rupture in the union's ranks before Christmas, may have been healed in large measure by the company's decision not to distribute the holiday paychecks.

THE UNION, meanwhile, appears to be orchestrating its own campaign of persuasion. Following the current Christmas week shutdown, the union filed an unfair labor practice complaint with the National Labor Relations Board in Los Angeles. It has issued its own bulletins and flyers, and at its membership meeting in Veterans Stadium a week ago Sunday, its failure to open the floor to discussion was considered by some to be a skillful means of avoiding a possible open split among its members. In the end, thanks to an emotional speech by one union leader, the audience was brought to its feet in shouting endorsement of the negotiating committee and its rejection of the company's contract offer.

Significantly, as the complaints of a few at the meeting indicated, the union did not offer to put the company's proposal to a vote of the membership, as Douglas officials have been seeking to have done.

IN ANY CASE, it seems certain that the union doesn't want to risk the appearance of any division within its ranks.

Moreover, it would hardly do for the union to accept what it considers to be a totally inadequate contract offer when, in two months, its bargaining hand will be strengthened immeasurably by the entrance on the scene of a powerful ally: the International Association of Machinists.

Why the puzzling rift in labor relations?

At that time, the machinists' contract at McDonnell Douglas' St. Louis plant will have expired, and the two unions, operating under a unity agreement signed in St. Louis recently, can strike the company's facilities on a nationwide basis if they choose to.

Aware of that possibility, McDonnell Douglas officials are obviously anxious to get an agreement in Southern California that would set a pattern for St. Louis and eliminate the threat of a damaging strike against all the company's facilities at one time. Whether the possibility of a company-wide strike is also behind the company's seeming efforts to precipitate a Southern California walk-out can only be guessed at.

Some observers feel that it has something to do with the company's strategy — although the primary reason for McDonnell Douglas' apparent willingness to court a local strike, they say, is the slowdown in commercial plane orders, especially in the DC-10 line, the keystone of Douglas' business.

Most people agree that the decline in DC-10 sales is due in large part to the recession in the airline industry, although a few union people prefer to blame a less-than-effective sales policy in the McDonnell Douglas division — a contention that is difficult to prove and obviously subject to challenge.

Douglas acknowledges that it has been turning out DC-10s at a declining rate in recent months — a decline that has been reflected, in fact, in steady layoffs at the plant. Since December of last year, for example, when the work force stood at 20,700, 1,000 employees have been laid off. (And it's still declining," says Ray Towne, director of external affairs for Douglas. "We don't know how low it will go.")

TOWNE SAYS "it's been a slow time in sales for everyone," although some union people claim that Boeing Aircraft Co. has been experiencing no such slowdown. One thing is indisputable, though: it's been a slow time for the DC-10, the company's jumbo jetliner. Where Douglas once produced one DC-10 a week, the figure is now closer to one half. And the decision has been made to reduce it to 42.

Whether Douglas is actually losing money as a result of the decline is harder to say. Corporation officials won't give out any dollar figures on how the aircraft division is doing. Whatever the situation at Douglas, though, it's apparent that McDonnell Douglas has been doing well as a corporation.

Corporate profits in 1973, for example, amounted to $129 million, compared to $111 million for the previous year. Of the $3 billion in revenues that McDonnell Douglas chalked up in 1973, commercial airliner sales accounted for 43 per cent of the figure, indicating that commercial plane orders continue to represent a highly significant share of the corporation's business.

DOUGLAS OFFICIALS, acutely mindful of Douglas' separate troubles at this time, have tried to convince the work force that the company's contract proposal, which falls below the pattern established by other aerospace agreements this year, is designed to strengthen the company's position vis-a-vis its chief competitor in the commercial airline field, Boeing Aircraft Co.

The stiffest competition that McDonnell Douglas has (in the commercial field) comes from Boeing," the company asserts. In fact, for the first eight months of this year, the commercial sales gap between the two firms amounted to a staggering $1.2 billion in Boeing's favor, Douglas says.

Douglas spokesman Charles Chappell concedes that Boeing, having gotten the jump on Douglas in the early development and production of commercial jetliners, has been ahead of Douglas since the mid-fifties. But he also adds that "the disparity has never been as great as it is now."

WHICH MAY EXPLAIN, from another perspective, why McDonnell Douglas is taking an unusually tough stand in this year's negotiations — and why, in fact, it may even be willing to lock out its union personnel for an extended period. As it has strongly hinted it might.

As the company sees it, if Douglas continues to pay higher wages and benefits to its workers than Boeing, "the sales figures would swing even further in Boeing's favor," and that could only mean fewer jobs at Douglas.

For that reason, the company says, it wants to bring Douglas wages into closer alignment with Boeing's. To do that, it has offered the UAW here a 3 per cent increase for each of three years, plus a cost-of-living adjustment that, in the first year, would raise the average Douglas wage by a total of 75 cents or four.

BOEING'S first-year increase, on the other hand, comes to $1.03 an hour — or 28 cents more than Douglas' offer. The story at other aerospace firms appears to be the same. The settlement at Lockheed calls for a 97-cent-an-hour first-year increase, at North American Rockwell 98 cents and at LTV 94 cents.

The recent Boeing settlement has put Boeing's workers at roughly the same pay scale as Douglas workers, who get $6.71 an hour. Once a new agreement is reached here, though, Douglas employees would gain their traditional advantage — although if the company has its way, the gap will have been narrowed to some extent.

The union contends that the company is also trying to retreat in other areas, such as seniority.

IT MAY BE TRUE, as some reports have it, that McDonnell Douglas' workers average less than their counterparts at Lockheed and Rockwell, but the point is, the company insists, Boeing is Douglas' chief competitor — not Lockheed, and especially not Rockwell, which operates largely in the space field and in government contracts.

Douglas' argument that it must remain competitive with Boeing in order to maintain commercial production in Long Beach and keep its work force intact here has a persuasive ring to it. Nonetheless, the union argues that McDonnell Douglas — that is, the corporation as a whole — can well afford to give Douglas workers what other aerospace firms have given their employees this year.

"There's no question of putting the company out of business," says a UAW official in the union's Detroit headquarters. Douglas may have pleaded hardship, he said, but "it has never pleaded poverty. And the fact remains that our people in Long Beach have to go to the same grocery stores as Rockwell and LTV workers. They don't get any break in the marketplace, either."

Union officials further argue that Douglas is also in competition with Lockheed, Rockwell and LTV. But even if Douglas is going through a difficult period at this time — and the slump won't last long, they believe — they wonder why the corporation as a whole can't come to its assistance. "They say we're corporate teammates, the Douglas and St. Louis plants," says UAW spokesman Douglas Griffith. "We seem to be teammates in fair weather. So why not in foul?" After all, he notes, the corporation's net profits "have exceeded $100 million in each of the last five years."

Griffith also notes that Sanford McDonnell, in a recent interview with Forbes magazine, indicated he expects DC-10 sales to turn around in the months ahead, suggesting that the slowdown is only temporary in the company's eyes.

Whatever the business prospects, one thing seems evident: labor relations at Douglas have become the most strained in recent memory. And even if the current labor crisis is resolved — with or without a strike or lockout — its effects are likely to be felt for a long time to come.

George Robeson An unChristmas card for you

THIS IS THE TIME of year I would hate, if I sent Christmas cards. I gave up sending Christmas cards, and for very good reasons.

For example: you order 100 Christmas cards, engraved with the family name. Perhaps it even features a photo of the family. You send them all out, and then the mail comes in.

You find you have received cards from at least ten people to whom you sent no cards. So you run down to the store and buy a box of 25 ordinary cards and mail those out. This goes on right up to Christmas.

Sooner or later, two of the people to whom you sent cards will meet. One of them will say, "Hey that sure was a cute card from the Robesons, wasn't it, all engraved and everything."

And the other guy will say, "Oh ... yeah," realizing that this was not the card he received. If he has real class, and savoir-faire and all that good stuff, he will say, "Oh? They signed mine personally."

Next problem: you get stuck with an over-buy of Christmas cards one year. You have plenty left for the next year. But when the next year comes, you can't remember who got those cards last year, and you're juggling two sets of cards into one list.

It's not a rare hassle at all, it's universal. I was discussing it with advertising executive Chuck Davis the other day, a man faced with the same sort of problems who arrived at a similar solution.

He started calling his friends. He figured it out, dollar by dollar, and found that it was not only more fun to call people and wish them a Merry Christmas or happy holidays or whatever it is he says, but that it is also cheaper. And no friend can describe the nature of the phone call to another friend, which solves the first problem I mentioned.

Davis has had nothing but trouble with Christmas cards all his life. He ordered cards one year for one of his clients, the Port of Long Beach. More than 1,500 of these had been addressed and were ready for the mail when his office got a card from the Port of Los Angeles. It was the same card.

Panic! He went to a printer, ordered a whole new batch of cards on a rush-basis, and then saved his old cards, which he mailed out two years later when it was hoped everybody would have forgotten what the old Port of Los Angeles cards looked like.

Now, he works it this way: he contacts the Los Angeles Port public relations people and asks them if they are ordering this year's cards from the catalogue or making the cards themselves. If they're making their own cards, Chuck orders from the book. If they are ordering from the book, he designs his own.

What a mess to go through just to wish someone "Merry Christmas, Happy New Year."

I've had more fun shaking hands with people this past week than I ever had addressing Christmas cards.

CHRISTMAS CARDS always sadden me, anyway. After Jan. 1, when you start tearing down the decorations and leaving all those empty spaces in the room so that it never looks quite right again, you lose out the cards. One year, I went through the cards and kept reading sentiments such as "May the peace and joy of Christmas be with you the whole year through."

Whatever happened to the rest of the year? I proposed that people send such greetings to each other in the middle of the year, when they really need it, and I started getting Christmas cards from readers in June, July and August. I enjoyed them much more than I would have in December, but it's difficult to explain why.

I don't even give cards to my wife or my sons. What I have to say to them are not bad rhymes ground out by the thousands at the greeting-card factory.

My most unusual greeting this year came from the Postal Service. In a big official envelope was a Christmas card from a friend and a long letter from R.S. Young, the distribution manager of the Long Beach Post Office, in which he said he was very sorry the card was mangled. It's a form letter, but it's very thoughtful, and I don't care if they mangle a few next year, if they enclose that nice letter.

If Jesus were to come again

If there should be, on Christmas night, a second coming, would there not be soon a second crucifixion?

And this time, not by the Romans or the Jews, but by those who proudly call themselves Christians?

I WONDER. I wonder how we today would regard and treat this man with His strange and frightening and "impractical" doctrines of human behavior and relationships. Would we believe and follow, any more than the masses of people in His day believed and followed?

Would not the militarists among us assail Him as a cowardly pacifist because He urges us not to resist evil?

Would not the nationalists among us attack Him as a dangerous internationalist because He tells us we are all of one flesh?

Would not the wealthy among us castigate Him as a troublemaking radical because He bars the rich from entering the kingdom of heaven?

Would not the conservatives among us dismiss Him as a dreamy vagabond because He advises us to take no thought for the morrow, to lay up no treasures upon earth?

Would not the ecclesiastics among us denounce Him as a ranting heretic because He cuts through the cords of ritual and commands us only to love God and our neighbors?

Sydney Harris

Would not the sentimentalists among us deride Him as a cynic because He warns us that the way to salvation is narrow and difficult?

Would not the Puritans among us despise and reject Him because He eats and drinks with publicans and sinners, preferring the company of winebibbers and harlots to that of "respectable" church members?

Would not the sensual among us scorn Him because He fasts for 40 days in the desert, neglecting the needs of the body?

WOULD NOT the proud and important among us laugh at Him when He instructs the 12 disciples that he who would be "first" should be the one to take the role of the least and serve all?

Would not the worldly wise and educated among us be aghast to hear that we cannot be saved except we become as children, and that a little child shall lead us?

Would not each of us in his own way find some part of this man's saying and doing to be so threatening to our ways of life, so much at odds with our rooted beliefs, that we could not tolerate Him for long?

I wonder.

Medicine and you

By BEN ZINSER

A doctor takes issue with the statement of an AMA official that "staple-puncture" is "pure hokum." Dr. Frank Z. Warren, a New York anesthesiologist and psychiatrist, says of the procedure:

"We're neither supporting it nor knocking it, which is the only proper attitude toward something as new as this thing is."

Dr. Warren is executive director of the National Acupuncture Research Society. Staple-puncture, the procedure in question, involves inserting metal fasteners into a patient's ear with a staple gun. The gun was originally used by surgeons for quick suturing of the intestines.

Dr. Warren says that the staple itself, a form of acupuncture needle, does not do the work. But connected with a psychotherapeutic support program, the technique seems to hold some promise as an aid to weight loss.

He says the method also is being tested in some methadone clinics to see if it can help addicts kick their habits. Tests also are being run with alcoholics and smokers.

Earlier, the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Robert H. Moser, said that staple-puncture was "pure hokum."

Meanwhile, a new study indicates that acupuncture is a questionable form of treatment for deafness, according to a report in Medical Annals of the District of Columbia.

And a famed ear surgeon, Dr. Samuel Rosen, in a separate report, says:

"Acupuncture can offer deaf patients nothing today."

He describes a six-month trial of acupuncture in 40 severely deaf New York children in which he himself administered the acupuncture needles. His comment:

"For the present I see no basis for recommending acupuncture as a treatment modality for children with profound... deafness."

school of medicine in New York City.

In another report, this in Medical Tribune, a researcher says that acupuncture may be able to relax chronically tense muscles.

The finding is that of Dr. Arnold H. Gessel, a psychiatrist with the University of Pennsylvania school of dental medicine.

Using a device called an electromyograph, Dr. Gessel recorded substantial declines in muscle tension at the site of pain in two patients after acupuncture.

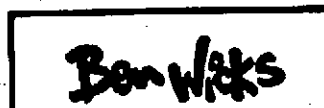

The doctor admits that two cases are a small series. But the changes observed were profound. So he thinks extensive research should be undertaken.

"I think muscular relaxation could explain some of the reported effects of acupuncture," he says. "This has all the earmarks of a real phenomenon."

As new reports come in on the status of acupuncture, this column will report them to you.

Bobby Unser set to open Shore Drive

By DON BRAKENBURY
Staff Writer

To note the opening of the final link of Shoreline Drive, 1974 USAC driving champion Bobby Unser is to fly to Long Beach from his Albuquerque home Friday to drive a Grand Prix race car for a couple of minutes—and then fly home.

Unser, winner of the Indianapolis 500 among many other races, plans to drive a Jorgensen Eagle from Linden Avenue up Shoreline Drive to Ocean Boulevard, make a loop and go back down Shoreline to Linden, and then once more head up the hill to Ocean.

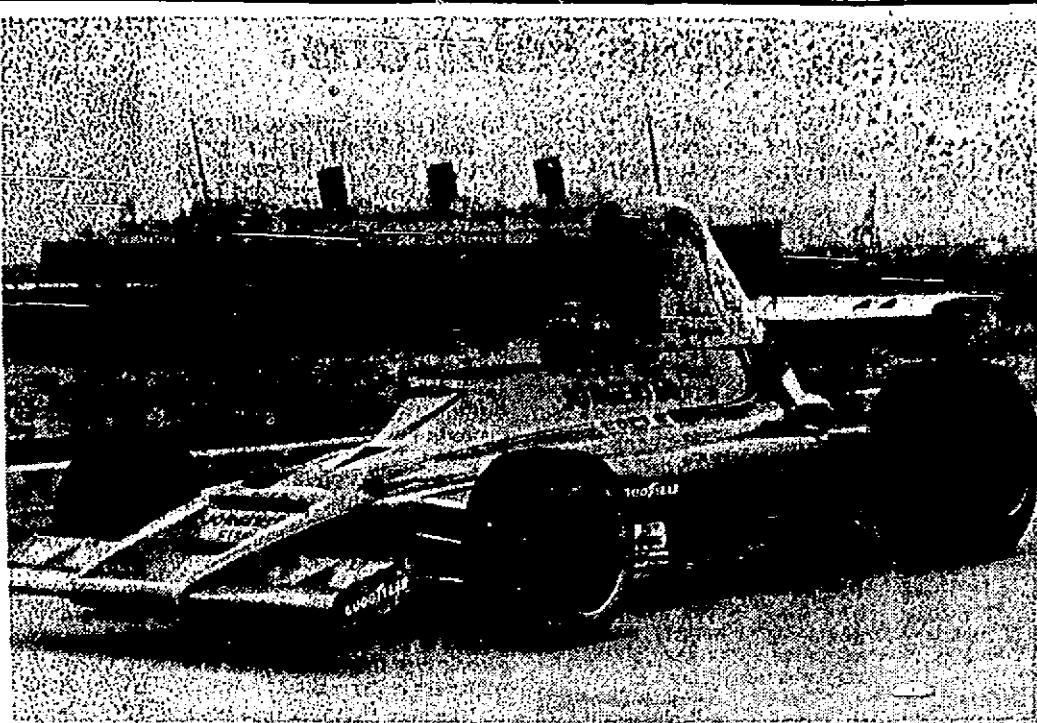

On his first pass at Ocean Boulevard, Unser is to drive through a tape, symbolic of "cutting the ribbon" to open the segment of Shoreline Drive from Linden Avenue to Ocean Boulevard.

Use of Unser and the Jorgensen Eagle, which was built by retired driver Dan Gurney, in the opening ceremony also is to note that in April, 1975, a portion of Shoreline Drive will be part of the course of the Long Beach Grand Prix.

The Federation Internationale des Automobiles, international governing body of Grand Prix Racing, recently approved the Long Beach race as one of only two Grand Prix events in the United States.

The "ribbon-cutting" ceremony is set for 10 a.m. Friday.

With the opening of the final segment, Shoreline Drive will be completed as a six-lane roadway from the south end of Long Beach Freeway, across Pacific Terrace, to connect to Ocean Boulevard at Alamitos Avenue.

RACE CAR DRIVER BOBBY UNSER IS TO NOTE OPENING OF SHORELINE DRIVE 1974 USAC Champion To Drive Jorgensen Eagle At Ceremony Friday

Total construction cost of the project, including landscaping, was $2.9 million.

The first segment, started in July, 1970, was a $1,240,000 project by Sully-Miller Contracting Co., which carried Shoreline Drive from the end of the Long Beach Freeway to Chestnut Avenue, linking it with Queen's Way Bridge. The work also included a bridge at Golden Shore.

Second segment, from Chestnut Avenue to Linden Avenue, was begun in October, 1972, under a $910,000 contract with Griffith Co., while the final link to Ocean Boulevard was started last March 18 under a $653,000 contract with Sully-Miller Contracting Co.

City Engineer Tom Marchese, whose office designed the improvement, said it will relieve congestion on Ocean Boulevard, particularly when events are being held in the Long Beach Arena, Auditorium or the proposed new Exhibit Hall.

Shoreline Drive also will serve the proposed Brook-INA hotel-restaurant complex along the southeast shoreline of Pacific Terrace, the proposed aquatic park and the State Colleges and Universities headquarters now under construction adjacent to the former Navy Landing, Marchese said.

Beautification of the project is being carried out under a $97,000 contract with Valley Crest Landscape.

Torrance will share federal project funds

By BOB ANDREW
Staff Writer

After deciding by a 5-2 vote to participate in programs under the federal Housing and Community Development Act, the Torrance City Council has delayed until a Jan. 2 workshop session any action on priorities for spending the $783,000 in first-year funds.

The council authorized allocation of 10 per cent of that amount to provide a five-member staff in the Planning Department to administer the program. Except for an associate planner to be designated as head of the team, all of the staff will be new employees.

Councilmen George Surber and William Uerkwitz, both long-time opponents of most federal programs, cast the two dissenting votes on authorization of the program, which will run for at least three years, with the possibility of congressional extension for another three years.

Also postponed to the Jan. 2 meeting was a hearing on an appeal of his discharge by former police officer Morton R. Hesse.

Hesse was formally discharged in February on charges of misconduct and failure to comply with department rules, allegedly after repeated incidents involving drinking.

The Hesse hearing is scheduled for 6 p.m. with the discussion of priorities on federal community development funds immediately afterward.

During Monday's meeting, Assistant City Manager Jerome Scharfman said the staff had not recommended use of these funds for development of existing city parks because there is currently more than $1 million in federal revenue-sharing funds earmarked for that purpose.

The council has a shopping list of more than $8 million worth of projects that were suggested during public hearings on use of the community development funds.

Wahtawaso T. Gillespie

L.B. civic leader dies

Rosary is to be recited Thursday at 4 p.m. in the chapel of Mottell's Mortuary for Wahtawaso T. Gillespie, Long Beach civic leader who died Sunday at the age of 87. Requiem Mass is to be celebrated Friday, 8 a.m. in St. Anthony Church.

A native of Montreal, Canada, who was educated in Canada and France, she was a direct descendant of the Iroquois Indian tribe and had the title of Princess Wahtawaso, which means bright star.

With her husband, the late Louis J. Gillespie, a Kansas City banker and live stock commission merchant, she moved to Long Beach in 1919.

Mrs. Gillespie chaired the Long Beach Tuberculosis Association Christmas seal drive for seven consecutive years. She was past president and life member of Eboli Club of Long Beach, and past president of the Eboli Club of Signal Hill, and headed the Camp Fire Girls of Long Beach.

She was a delegate to the first Pan Pacific Women's Conference, and early in World War II chaired the British War Relief Association in this area.

Indicative of the wide range of her interests, she was a past president of the California Cliff Dwellers Club, a life member of the Pacific Geographic Society, the Southwestern Anthropological Association, the American Philatelic Society and Long Beach Stamp Collectors Club. For her work in depicting the Bible in stamps, she received a special award from the American Philatelic Society.

A member of St. Anthony's Church, Mrs. Gillespie was active in Catholic Daughters of America and the Third Order of St. Francis.

She maintained an active interest in helping the unfortunate, especially the American Indian. She was named a patron member of the Southwest Museum in recognition of the gift of Indian ethnic and archeological material and artifacts.

She was a charter member and sponsor of IOTA, BETA ETA and Xi chapters of Beta Sigma Phi Sororities in Long Beach, and a charter member of the Pacific Coast Club.

Surviving is a son, John J. Gillespie, lieutenant colonel U.S. Army, Ret., five grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

City to ask new drug fund grant

Submission of an application for $501,000 from the National Institute of Mental Health for third-year funding for Long Beach's Drug Abuse Rehabilitation Program was approved Tuesday by the City Council.

The grant requires the city to match it with $89,947 in cash and $35,325 in "in-kind" services, according to City Manager John R. Mansell.

"The major emphasis of this program is assisting the drug abuser to eliminate his dependency on narcotics," said Mansell, "reducing drug violations."

It also provides an opportunity for development of vocational skills so the individual can get back into the labor market, the city manager said.

The program has been in operation since June 1, 1973, and Mansell said it has "progressed exceptionally well." In 1974, he said, the drug center handled 2,400 outpatient detoxification cases with "very little" recidivism.

Clinical services offered include medical evaluation and treatment, individual and group counseling, vocational rehabilitation, referrals and family services, Mansell said.

Laser-light trip date changed

The holiday bus trip to the Griffith Park Observatory laser-light show, which Long Beach Public Library is sponsoring, is to be held next Monday instead of Friday, as reported earlier.

Deadline for signing up for the trip still is 8 p.m. Thursday, however, City Librarian Frances Henselman warned.

The bus is scheduled to leave the parking lot of the Main Library, Atherton Street and Ximeno Avenue, at 2 p.m. Monday and is to return about 6:30 p.m.

The bus fare is $1.50 round-trip, plus $2 for the laser show. Children under 12 years of age must be accompanied by an older person, Miss Johnson said.

L.B. Council approves new bank's sewer line

Plans for construction of a 10-inch sewer line to serve the 14-story Union Bank Building, now under construction in Ocean Gate, were approved Tuesday by the Long Beach City Council.

The city manager's office was authorized to advertise for bids on the project, which will cost an estimated $15,600.

The work is to consist of approximately 600 feet of 10-inch vitrified-clay pipe under the south side of Ocean Boulevard between Daisy Avenue and Golden Shore, plus an 8-inch vitrified-clay lateral pipe to provide a connection for the building at the property line.

End sought to airport car jams

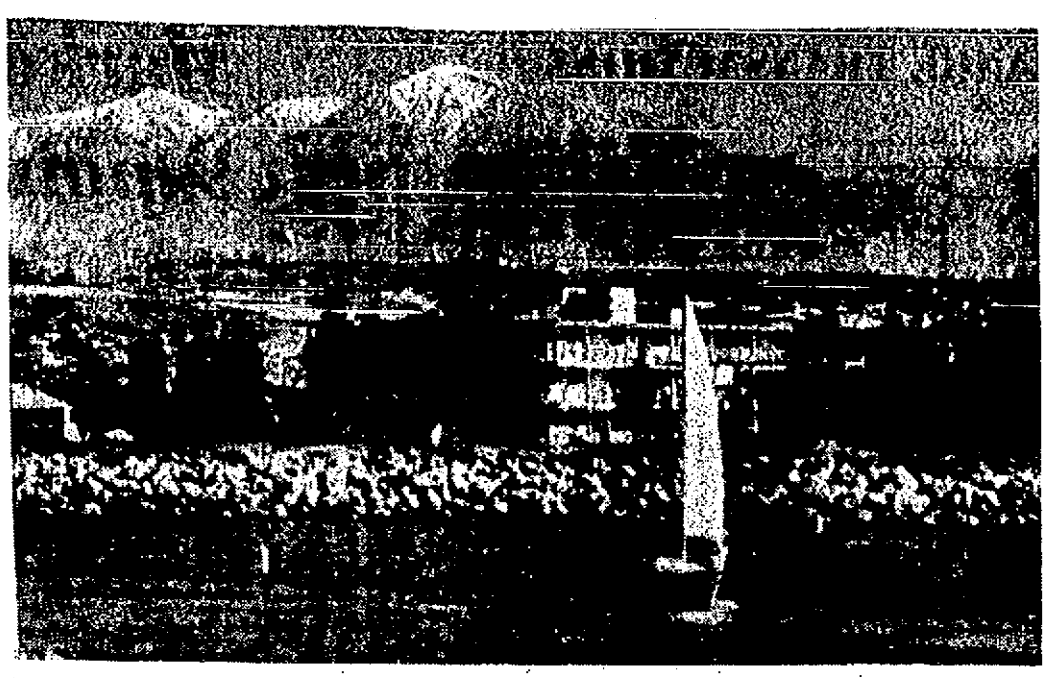

Our L.A. Bureau
Supervisors Tuesday called for remedial measures to avoid the type of heavy traffic congestion that tied up travelers at Los Angeles International Airport last weekend.

Supervisor Pete Schabarum said the congestion was worsened by heavy fog, but "it brings into focus once again the failures of our transit system and the need for alternatives to meet such emergencies."

On his motion, supervisors decided to ask the Los Angeles Airport Commission to stress development and use of Ontario International Airport as an alternative to Los Angeles International.

Harbor City shooting

Trial set in fatal party melee

A young Harbor City man was arraigned Tuesday in Long Beach Superior Court on a charge he directed murderous rifle fire into the scene of a party he had attempted to crash.

Ruben Lee Polk, 18, entered a plea of innocent to the murder charge in the court of Judge John A. Arguelles, who tentatively set the defendant's trial for Feb. 4.

Polk was arrested in connection with an incident which left one person dead, two wounded and others injured in street-fighting which erupted at the scene of an outdoor party in Harbor City last Nov. 15.

Investigators who testified at the defendant's preliminary hearing in San Pedro Municipal Court said Polk was arrested after fingerprints, lifted from a rifle discarded at the scene, were found to match his prints.

According to other witnesses, that rifle had been used by a man who pumped rapid fire into a crowd of persons.

Two witnesses at the preliminary hearing told the court how they had been wounded.

a neighbor, 19-year-old Ralph Sanchez, killed by a slug which struck him above the right eye.

Other testimony indicated a crowd of from 40 to 200 persons gathered in the street near the party scene after an attempt to crash the party failed.

After windshields in several party-goers' cars were smashed by persons in the street, investigators said the two groups became embroiled in a street battle, which ended with the gunfire.

Jesse Q. Bristow, famed pilot, dies

POMPAHO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Jesse Q. Bristow, who learned to fly during the barnstorming age and became a prominent test and stunt pilot, died here Monday.

Bristow, born in Granite City, Ill., learned to fly in Texas in 1924. He became a stunt pilot for traveling air circuses and worked as a test pilot for a number of plane builders.

Hard times may hit the road

Our L.A. Bureau
In keeping with the lean times, county officials Tuesday were ordered to study the possibility of saving money by painting highway stripes only three inches wide instead of four.

In winning support for the study, Supervisor Pete Schabarum said he recently read a news account in which Gov. Dan Evans of Washington predicted the state would save $1 million over the next two years by trimming the size of highway stripes.

"If the same approach were followed in Los Angeles, I imagine the savings could be quite significant without creating a safety problem," Schabarum said.

Under the Washington

plan, when existing four-inch stripes are repainted, one inch will be cut off one side.

When the next painting is due, the inch will be lopped off the opposite side.

In this way, the governor said, highway stripes still would be four inches wide even though a quarter of the width would be slightly faded.

Schabarum said the county study should include an estimate of savings and should also take into account the trimming of crosswalk lines and other street markings.

COUNCIL ACTION

Long Beach City Council action Tuesday:
Absent: Mayor Edwin W. Wade, Councilwoman Renee B. Simon.

Referred to the city manager for a report in two weeks a report from the city attorney on operations and practices of towing companies in Long Beach.

Approved plans for storm drain Project 5102, Unit 2, and authorized Los Angeles County Flood Control District to proceed.

Approved plans and advertising for bids for construction of a sewer line in the south side of Ocean Boulevard between Golden Shore and Daisy Avenue.

Authorized contracts with Clarke Painting Co. for painting interior corridors of Long Beach Arena, with Peerless Wiring Materials Co. for wiring rags, with United Computer and Financial and with International Business Machines Corp. for computer hardware, and with Addressograph Multigraph Corp. for a direct-impression composing machine.

Authorized purchase of additional dwelling units in the Otis H. Hubbard Building.

Approved an amendment to the agreement with Signal Landmark, Inc., granting an easement for continued use of a city water line near Temple Avenue and the Signal Hill city limits.

Confirmed the reappointment of James R. Buckingham to a new two-year term as a trustee of the Southeast Mosquito Abatement District, effective Jan. 2.

Adopted a resolution withdrawing annexation Increment No. 238, uninhabited territory east of Atlantic Avenue and Los Angeles River and west of Atlantic Place, from the Consolidated Fire Protection District of Los Angeles County.

Authorized an application to the National Institute of Mental Health for third-year funding of the city Drug Abuse Rehabilitation Program.

Authorized contracts with Brown-Bexis Equipment for parts for Elgin street sweepers and beach pacer bodies, with Case Power and Equipment for Case tractor parts, with Engine Parts Corp. for rebuilt gasoline engines, with Dearth Machinery Co. for parts for Wayne street sweepers, with Harley-Davidson of Long Beach, Inc., for parts for Harley-Davidson motorcycles and with So Cal White Trucks, Inc., for parts for White trucks.

Authorized an agreement with Guilford Glazer for city acceptance of his gift of a half acre of land at the northwest corner of Artesia Boulevard and Line Avenue.

Referred to the city manager a communication from Mary Winfree, 109 E. Louise St., requesting consideration of actions to facilitate use of shopping areas and public buildings by the handicapped.

Referred to the city manager the annual audit of the city treasury investment and municipal fund cash balances for the 1973-74 fiscal year.

Referred to the legislative committee a communication from the City of Gardena, enclosing a copy of its resolution opposing proposed regulations under Titles 9, 19 and 22 of the California Administrative Code relating to licensing and certification of community care facilities.

Approved tentative parcel map 5410, east of Atlantic Avenue and north of 17th Street, as requested by the Redevelopment Agency.

Adopted a resolution asking the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors to permit registration of voters to render services to Long Beach in connection with the special municipal election in the Seventh Councilmanic District on Feb. 18.

Adopted ordinances amending the municipal code to prohibit parking on Pacific Coast Highway from Seventh Street south to the Orange County line, and creating certain positions and deleting others in the Department of Law.

Authorized the city to pay the estimated $1,800 printing costs for statements of candidates in the special Feb. 18 municipal election in Councilmanic District Seven.

Asked for preparation of a resolution of commendation to the Gas Department on its 50th anniversary, and commended the Recreation Department for its annual report, prepared by Eileen Rockwell.

Asked the city manager to conduct a survey of the 222 residences in Cherry Manor to determine their wishes in efforts to solve the problems stemming from the proximity of the residential zone to the industrial zone in the area east of Cherry Avenue and south of Artesia Boulevard.

Applications accepted for 'net' officials

Applications for officials for the Lakewood Youth Basketball program are being accepted at the Recreation Department at Lakewood City Hall, 5050 Clark Ave.

A spokesman said applicants will have to attend a series of meetings on job responsibilities and rules. The first meeting is set for Wednesday, January 8, 5:30 p.m. at Mayfair Park.

Starting pay for the officials is $2.22 an hour.

Ebenezer delivers his Christmas jeers

Deck us with our words of folly,
Fa la la la la, la la la la.
Did we say all that, by golly?
There oughta be a law, la la la la.

Oh, come get a face full, a pox on the triumphant;
Oh come ye, oh — hey, don't let all that warmth in!
We're trying to get ready for Minnesota.
"Yes, that should be delightful. Good weather for evicting widows."

Well, if it isn't Ebenezer Scrooge. What brings you around?

"It's time to distribute our Christmas jeers."

You're right, and we do have quite a collection this year. Seems half the people in sports are still trying to extract their feet from their mouths. You recall George Foreman, of course—the most destructive force known to man?

"Uh-huh, and wasn't there a new game invented this year?"

YOU MEAN THE World Football League? The Jacksonville owner said, "I don't go into any business with the idea of losing money. I have worked all my life for this."

"He was very optimistic. How'd he do?"

His players worked most of the season for nothing.

"But they had great attendance at Philadelphia.

Didn't they get 65,000 for a national TV game?"

Yeah, but only 6,200 suckers paid for their seats.

"So why didn't they announce the paid attendance?"

The owner explained that. He said, "If I had told the truth, it would have been ludicrous."

THE OTHER FOOTBALL league had an interesting year. The players went on strike, at least until Roger Staubach—you know, the old Navy quarterback —and a few others started going to training camp.

"I remember. That guy Ed Garvey who runs the players association said, 'I'm glad I wasn't at Pearl Harbor with him.' Sounds like my kind of guy."

RICH

"By the way, do the Rams still have that owner all of the players love?"

You mean Carroll Rosenbloom. Sure, they even gave him the game ball after beating the Redskins because he was in the hospital and couldn't go to the game.

"Yeah, how sickening. Don't they know that they're labor and he's management?"

Well, he tried to tell them once, in his own way.

When the coach benched John Hadl, Rosenbloom said,

"We expect John to be with us for a long time."

—And...?"

Hadl was traded the next day.

"Maybe there's hope for him then. But you said the Rams beat the Redskins. How could that be? Isn't George Allen still coaching?"

Yes, and still putting in those 110 days. You'd be delighted to hear, Eb, that he even said he wasn't even going to send out Christmas cards this year.

"Well, how do Christmas cards help you win?"

Funny, Eb, but that's exactly what George said.

SPEAKING ABOUT winning, Eb, your favorite team won the World Series again.

"Like I always say, the team that sins together wins together."

But they might not be together long. Their best pitcher has been declared available to the highest bidder.

"Is Walter O'Malley trying to sign him?"

Guess so. Bowie Kuhn hasn't said anything.

"Who do you think runs baseball, anyway?"

Oh, Bowie made a couple of big decisions this year.

He told the Atlanta Braves they couldn't save Henry Aaron's 714th home run for Milwaukee and ordered him to hit it in Cincinnati.

He even got tough with the owners. He suspended the New York Yankees' owner for two years for getting tangled up in Watergate. Before that he got on Ray

Some people Santa shouldn't forget

Being the kind man that he is, Santa thoughtfully left these presents under the Christmas tree this morning for the following personalities:

Isiah Robertson—A stopwatch. (Man, when Butch "tells it like it is," you need a calendar.)

Woody Hayes—The manuscript, "A Touch of Class."

Mike Marshall—A six-pack of mouthwash.

Fred Dryer—A Cadillac. (A Volkswagen camper is no vehicle for an all-pro.)

Bill Sharman—A dozen electric buzzers that can be fitted into a like number of basketball shorts.

Dan Devine—Ara Parseghian's retreaded, ear-muffs.

Bill Buckner—A gross of personality pills.

BILLIE JEAN KING—A copy of the book "Cosell!" (If she's gonna play the part, she might as well do it right.)

Chris Evert—A can of "BJK Repellent."

Jimmy Connors—A disposal container for those
"HER" towels he no longer needs.

Bobby Riggs—A long, silver hook (his vaudeville act needed one months ago).

Steve Garvey—An engraved "Thank You" plaque from the Baseball Writers Assn.

Jack Kent Cooke—A "Thanks For Nothing, Boss" garland from his abused employees.

Chas. Finley—A bunch of hankies from Catfish Hunter.

Catfish Hunter—Baseball's equivalent of the Medal of Honor.

ANTHONY DAVIS—A fly-swatter for the swarm of pest agents buzzing around him.

John McKay—An oil well with Santa's promise it will produce a further supply of O. J. and A. D.-type running backs.

Walt Alston—A new rabbit's foot.

Wayne Howard—The gaily bedecked head of that "ditty" Hawaiian football player.

Dwight Jones—Written promise of another game with new "arch rival" USC.

Perry Moore—More coaches wrapped in red ribbon like Howard and Jones.

Joe Scibelli—Another carton of personality pills (these for distribution to some of his less obliging teammates).

CHUCK KNOX—The book, "Sparkling Sayings
For The New Year."

George Allen—A king-size crying towel (one that will last a whole year).

Lawrence McCutcheon—A snowmobile, to be used immediately.

James Harris—A turn-up-the-nose gadget (for instant flicking whenever he sees one of those non-believers).

John Hadl—A Bible (so any new owner can swear on it).

Muhammad Ali—A box of candied humility.

George Foreman—A prepaid Arthur Murray
course.

Sonny Jurgensen—A prepaid Jack La Lanne
course.

DR. STEVE HORN—A mimeograph machine (this will make it much easier to send out his NCAA mandates to every paper in the country).

Howard Cosell—A mummy's tomb.

Cathy Rigby Mason—A dozen elevator shoes.

Merlin Olsen—Another year's supply of "Fountain of Youth" medicine.

Bobby Grich—A much-desired plane ticket to Oakland.

Jack Snow—The red badge of courage (the original).

Bowie Kuhn—A new scriptwriter (the old one didn't produce a single thing).

Chick Hearn—A new rug (the oldie tilts slightly when he gets excited).

STU NAHAN—A dinner-for-two invitation from Jim Healy.

Jim Healy—The leather-bound essay, "Honor Among Thieves."

Jeff Burroughs—Santa couldn't come up with a thing. After all, what CAN you get for the man who has everything?

But for you and you and George Robinson (Robson?)—A very merry Christmas and a year's subscription to the HHH System.

Down the backstretch

Santa Anita Park, capital of American thoroughbred horse racing each winter, begins its 40th meeting Thursday. Many of the nation's finest horses, jockeys and trainers will participate in the 76-day meeting at the Arcadia track.

Cobb a wonder 'Lonesome Lawrence' vs. with books as Vikes' 14-man defense well as on grid

Marvin Cobb has had some illustrious moments in football and baseball at USC.

He has intercepted 10 passes during a three-year career as a defensive back and was selected on the all-coast and all-Pacific-8 Conference teams this season.

His 56-yard punt return helped USC score its fifth touchdown against Notre Dame in a 55-24 win and his 11.1-yard punt return average was best in the league.

As a shortstop on the Trojans' national championship baseball team last spring, Cobb batted
.329 and led the club in stolen bases with 14.

But the biggest score
the senior from Notre Dame High in Riverside posted was in a Scholastic Aptitude Test prior to enrolling at USC.

He achieved an SAT
score of 1240, only a shade away from the genius level.

So don't include Marvin Cobb in any discussion of big, dumb athletes.

"We will not be out-thought or outsped with Marvin Cobb at safety," says Trojan football coach John McKay.

Cobb won a National Merit Scholarship and a Bank of America Math Award as a senior at Notre Dame High in Riverside and is on a combined academic-athletic scholarship at Troy.

"My primary goal is to go to law school," says Cobb. "Corporate law ap-

MARVIN COBB
Man of many talents

pears to be the most attractive."

But he would like to combine athletics and law school, at least for a few years.

"Law study can be worked in better with football than baseball," he says. "But baseball always was my primary sport."

Although Cobb was CIF Small Schools Player of the Year in baseball, he has never been drafted.

"Some scouts talked to me, but I guess they knew I was going to attend USC and decided not to draft me."

Now the scouts will be dealing with a business finance major who has the option of football or baseball.

Cobb's options at the moment are limited. He's concentrating solely on USC's football game with Ohio State in the Rose

What will happen when the Rams' "Lonesome
Lawrence" offense meets Minnesota's 14-man defense Sunday?

"I don't think it's going to be a problem for us," says Chuck Knox, "because our quarterback has the ability to change the play and do whatever has to be done."

In recent games the Rams have introduced offensive alignments featuring Lawrence McCutcheon, the NFL's fourth leading rusher, as the only set back.

But the Vikings also have added a wrinkle since losing to the Rams,
20-17, at the Coliseum
Nov. 24.

Taking the trend toward trick defenses a step farther, Minnesota coach Bud Grant is putting 14 players on the field for the defensive huddle—usually two extra defensive backs and a fifth defensive lineman, Bob Lurtsema.

The idea is to force the opponent to call its play in the huddle without knowing if it will face a five-man line, a six-man secondary, regular 4-3-4 or something in between.
When the offensive team leaves its huddle, the three extra Vikings leave the field.

Knox points out,
"They've been caught this year when the other three didn't get off the field before the snap," and suggests a quick snap as one way to discourage the play.

The other is for Ram quarterback James Harris to follow his normal routine of calling the play sent in from the bench, then scan the defense. If the play fits, use it.

"This is nothing new," Knox says. "It's been done before."

Who started it?
"I think Bud Grant said that Amos Alonzo Stagg started it," Knox smiles.

The Ram coach rates
the Vikings, 30-14 winners over St. Louis last week,
"similar in most ways" to the Redskins, whom the Rams defeated, 19-10.

"But Minnesota also has a great running back in (Chuck) Foreman, who can catch the ball," Knox says.

That poses a title game matchup of perhaps the two best running backs in the National Conference.
Each led his team in rushing and pass receiving.

But it isn't only McCutcheon's talents that have allowed the Rams to develop their offense to a high degree of versatility.
The "new dimension" anticipated when Harris took over from John Hadl 10 games ago is becoming more evident by the week.

Even with McCutcheon standing alone, the Rams still have two running backs—McCutcheon and Harris. As Harris acquires expertise, more plays are added to his repertoire, including quarterback runs and roll-out options, where McCutcheon also is useful as a blocker.

The Rams gave the Redskins only one long look at their "Ace" formation, driving 82 yards for a touchdown with an alignment of two tight ends and two wide receivers, perfectly balanced so as to present no strong side keys.

Prior success with the "double slot"—dubbed the
"Lance offense" by radio announcer Dick Enberg as it features Lance Renence, Starr admitted,

"I've been a little disappointed in my travels around the country to see somehow of a slip by the Green Bay Packers."

"I hope to restore some of the prestige that was so much a part of this organization for many years."

Starr replaces Dan Devine, who quit eight days ago to become head coach at Notre Dame. It is his first head coaching job, though he has turned down several extremely lucrative offers to join other NFL teams.

The Packers had interviewed only two men—Starr and Green Bay assistant Dave Hanner—for the coaching vacancy.

Starr met with the Packers' executive committee in two prolonged sessions Monday to work out final details of the contract.

The pact is for three years. Starr said he would have been satisfied to

S'Anita underway Thursday

Ancient Title heads a list of nine entrants in Thursday's opening-day feature at Santa Anita, the $30,000-added Palos
Verdes Handicap.

The Palos Verdes will kick off Santa Anita's 40th season, highlighted by 76 racing days and $2.3 million in prize money.

Ancient Title, who won all three events of Santa Anita's Strub stakes series last year, is pitted against Beira, Tragic Isle, Princeley Native, Pianem, Palladium, King Of The Blues, Against The Snow and Tytus Casella in the six-furlong race.

Ancient Title is the winner of nine stakes races, six at Santa Anita. Laffit Pincay, a five-time Santa Anita riding champion, will be in the saddle.

Bill Mahorney will be aboard Beira, the co-holder of the Hollywood Park six-furlong mark of 1:07 4-5. Francisco Menia will ride Tragic Isle, second-place finisher behind Woodland Pines in last year's Palos Verdes.

If all nine start in the sprint, the winner will pick up $18,500 out of a gross purse of $32,000.

Garvey voted So. California athlete of year

Dodger first baseman
Steve Garvey, National League most valuable player the past season, has been chosen Southern California Athlete of the Year.

Garvey, who also was voted the most valuable player in last summer's All-Star game, was picked by the Citizen Savings
Athletic Foundation Hall Board.

In his sixth season with the Dodgers, the former Michigan State football player batted .312, had 200 hits and 111 RBI. He hit
.381 during the World Series with Oakland.

Garvey became only the sixth baseball player to receive the award in the past 26 years. The others were Nolan Ryan (1973), Sandy Koufax (1963),
Larry Sherry and Wally
Moon (1959) and Duke
Snider (1955).

BUCKEYES TO INVADE QUEEN MARY

General Woody Hayes and his Ohio State Buckeyes will storm the Queen
Mary Thursday afternoon.
Fear not Long Beach faithful, the controversial football coach and his Rose Bowl-bound football team will be guests of the city.

Led by Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin, the Buckeyes arrive at 3:30 for a tour of the ship and dinner in the King's Grill.
The public is invited to join in the welcoming ceremonies.

Red-nosed Rudolph proves cool little dude

Once upon a time there was this reindeer named Rudolph.

Rudolph was a cool little dude who liked to get it on and have a ball like any normal reindeer. The thing was, Rudolph wasn't altogether normal.

He had a red nose. As a matter of fact, it was a very shiny nose and if you ever saw it, you would even say it glows.

The other reindeer didn't dig red noses. They were all the time goofing off and having fun, but when Rudolph made the scene they laughed and called him names and wouldn't let poor Rudolph join in any reindeer games.

Not being allowed to join in any reindeer games is no joke. Their bashes really swing and everything is cool.

But the other reindeer would have no truck whatsoever with Rudolph and his red bugle and kept telling him to take a hike.

Anyway, where Rudolph lived was this old guy named Santa Claus. Santa Claus was a groovy old gent who had a big round belly which shook when he laughed like a big bowl of jelly. It had to be jelly because jam don't shake like that.

SANTA CLAUS had this thing for kids. He liked to make things for them. He had these little elves called elves helping him and all year they would make things for the kids. They'd make dolls and tin soldiers and toy drums that went rum-tum-tum and all sorts of things.

Once a year, like at Christmas time, Santa Claus would put all this stuff in a bag and put the bag on his sleigh. A sleigh is like a Firebird without wheels and it flies through the air and lands on rooftops and doesn't need a smog device and... like that.

With all the toys and goodies loaded on his sleigh, Santa Claus would split and go all over the place delivering the stuff to kids. Nobody knew why he did this, but maybe it was how the old guy got his jollies.

Anyway, the reason all the reindeer were around was that they pulled the sleigh. It was a big deal to help pull the sleigh, like making the first team at college or going to the Super Bowl or getting Mike Marshall's autograph.

There were some pretty big names on the varsity. Guys like Donner and Blitzen and Dancer and Prancer.

Naturally, Rudolph never expected to make it. Not with his scarlet schnozz and all. If you ever told him one day he would help pull the sleigh, he would have looked at you like you had rocks in your head.

Now, one Christmas Eve it came up foggy. Like pea soup, man. Santa Claus couldn't see the mitt in front of his face let alone the hood ornament on the sleigh.

"We've had it, baby," Santa said. "There's no way we can go out in this stuff."

THEN THE OLD boy looked over and saw Rudolph sitting alone digging the center spread in Playboy. Santa ambled over to Rudolph and laid this on him.

"Rudolph with your nose so bright, won't you guide my sleigh tonight?"

"You're putting me on," Rudolph replied.

"On the level, man," Santa Claus said. "No live." Sure enough, Rudolph got right up front and away they went all over delivering the stuff to the kids.

It goes without saying when they got back, Rudolph was a very fat cat. All of the reindeer loved him, and they shouted out with glee, "Rudolph the red-nosed reindeer, you'll go down in history."

Everybody lived happily ever after including Gene Autry, who made a phonograph record and enough money to buy a baseball team.

That about cools it except to mention the moral of the story.

There are a lot of things in this world worse than a red nose.

Brock voted 'Sports Man of the Year'

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI)—The bitterness of being denied baseball's Most Valuable Player award was eased somewhat Tuesday for Lou Brock when he was voted Sports Man of the Year by The Sporting News.

Brock's bid to break one of baseball's toughest records, Maury Wills' 104 stolen bases in the 1962 season, was climaxed Sept. 10 when the St. Louis speedster stole No. 105 to the chant of "Lou, Lou, Lou" from Cardinal fans.

He finished the season with 118 stolen bases and batted .306, both figures made more remarkable by the fact that Brock is 35 years old.

Teaming with Reggie Smith and Bake McBride in the outfield, the three batted over .300 to keep St. Louis in the East Division race down to the wire. However, the Cardinal starting pitching rotation didn't match their performance, and St. Louis finished 1-1-2 games behind Pittsburgh.

The fact that the Cardinals failed to take the pennant was noted when baseball writers voted the MVP award to Dodger first baseman Steve Garvey.

work on a year-to-year basis, "but my wife would have had a heart attack that way."

Starr, who will be 41 on Jan. 8, said no decision had been made on his coaching staff, but he has asked Hanner to stay on and "we hope to surround ourselves with people with diverse backgrounds—people who enjoy representing pro football."

Starr said he realized the job ahead is a challenge. The Packers have had only two winning seasons since Lombardi retired as coach after the 1967 season.

But, he said, he feels up to the challenge and paraphrased Winston Churchill by saying, "When a man is figuratively tapped on the shoulder, what a tragedy it would be if he is unprepared in his finest hour."

Starr said there were some obvious strengths and some obvious weaknesses in the Packers and "we hope to shore up the strengths and rid ourselves of the weaknesses."

entire Green Bay organization on a "rock-solid foundation."

Starr was the winningest championship quarterback in pro football history, leading the Packers to five NFL and two Super Bowl titles in seven years. He was the most valuable player in each of the first two Super Bowls and in 1970 he was chosen pro player of the decade by the Columbus, O., Touchdown Club.

A painful arm injury hampered his final years with Green Bay and he was forced to retire after the 1971 season when a series of operations failed to correct the problem.

He spent the 1972 season as an assistant to Devine, calling the signals from the sidelines as second-year quarterback Scott Hunter led the team on the field.

He quit after that one season and has been in business in Green Bay and Alabama since then. He has maintained his Green Bay home while his partner, Tom Acheson, looked after the Alabama portion of his affairs.

Coach Woody Hayes put his Ohio State Buckeyes through a tough two-hour workout at Citrus College Tuesday, while USC, the Bucks' New Year's Day Rose Bowl opponent, took the day off.

The Buckeyes worked primarily on sharpening their running, passing and blocking.

Greene, Player of the Game in last year's Rose Bowl, threw strikes to Doug France, Lenny Willis, Mike Bartoszek, Brian Baschnagel and Bob Hyatt.

Lou Pietrini, 6-3, 243-pound tackle, missed the workout. It was learned that he had suffered a concussion Monday in a collision with safety man Doug Plank. Pietrini was hit so hard that his helmet was twisted and bashed in.

Although Pietrini is expected to be ready to play New Year's Day, Hayes won't allow him to engage in any contact drills prior to game time.

Following the workout, the Buckeyes were treated to a Christmas Eve dinner party.

zel as the third wide receiver in the slot position—opens up all sorts of possibilities.

It only works, though, when a club has the right personnel, such as Harris, a quarterback who can run; McCutcheon, a strong running back who also can block; Pat Curran, a backup tight end of starting quality, and at least three deep threat wide receivers—Rentzel, Jack Snow and Harold Jackson.

It's enough to concern any defense, 14 men or not.

RAMBLING: Knox outlined additional measures the Rams will take to counter the cold climate at Bloomington Sunday. Equipment manager Don Hewitt is having pouches sewn onto the front of certain players' jerseys so they can warm their hands between plays, and the Rams have rented three butane gas blowers to place behind their bench.

"They are not provided by the Minnesota Vikings," says Knox. "I just hope we don't have too many people huddling around them."

Knox also has designated assistant coach Elijah Pitts as "our cold weather advisor." Pitts played in Green Bay for 10 years. "I told our players, if there's anything you want to know about playing in cold weather, just ask Elijah."

The Rams will leave at 3 Friday afternoon. The Vikings will leave tonight to practice in Tulsa but must return by Friday night, on orders from NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

The game starts at noon Minnesota time, which is 10 a.m. PST. The Rams are 1-8-1 at Minnesota since 1961. Their only win was 31-3 in 1963. Under Knox, they lost their last season, 10-9. They lost a 1967 playoff game at Bloomington, 23-20, after leading 17-7 at halftime behind Roman Gabriel.

Final statistics had the Vikings second in the NFC in total offense, the Rams second in total defense, although giving up only 181 points, fewest in the league.

Packers applaud Bart's selection

GREEN BAY (UPI)—Green Bay Packers players, both from the past and the present, greeted the announcement of Bart Starr's appointment as head coach and general manager Tuesday with enthusiasm.

"I'm a Bart Starr fan," said Ray Nitschke, the former linebacker. "He'll do a great job."

"I think and hope Bart will help the Packers return to the championship days when things were a lot more pleasant," said Gale Gillingham, an all-pro guard who played on teams with Starr in the 1960s and is still active.

"I'm certain that Bart, being the type of individual he is, will take the team back to the good old days. I'm certain he will do a great job."

Defensive end Clarence Williams also was pleased by the appointment.

"I think it's great," Williams said. "I think we've got the best man available."

Dave Hanner, a player during Starr's playing days and defensive coordinator of the team the past few years, said he was looking forward to working with Starr—if he is asked. Starr indicated he would be.

"I think Bart would be a great person to work for," Hanner said. "We've been great friends for many years. We've helped each other out in a lot of ways. I hope this relationship will continue."

"He has the temperament to do the job," said Nitschke. "He has proven

Florida's weather too hot for Fighting Irish

NAPLES, Fla. (UPI)—Notre Dame's Fighting Irish held their first Florida drill for their New Year's night meeting with Alabama on the Orange Bowl gridiron Tuesday and found the 84-degree sunshine oppressive.

"The heat was definitely a problem, but this is why we came here," coach Ara Parseghian said. "When we play New Year's night the conditions will be very much the same, and that's quite different from South Bend."

Parseghian said he selected Naples for the drills preceding the Orange Bowl game in Miami because it is on "the quieter side of Florida" and his players will be spared the distractions of the Miami area, 110 miles east.

The Irish had the day off today and planned to spend a quiet Christmas at their Marco Island Hotel, south of Naples.

Parseghian, who was given the key to the city of Naples Tuesday, said four or five days of running under the Gulf Coast sun should sharpen the Irish for their return match with Alabama. The teams met in the Sugar Bowl a year ago at New Orleans.

"I noticed that our timing was a bit sluggish, but we are really in better shape than I might have expected. I thought we might be rustier than we are," he said.

The Irish have been idle since their 55-24 loss to Southern California three weeks ago. "What happened in that third quarter is just something we'll have to shake off," Parseghian said.

Parseghian has announced that he will not coach Notre Dame next season, but he discounted the effect of his announcement on his players.

"We like to go into every ball game with the intention of doing the very best we can, and I don't think our players feel any differently about this one. Whether I've resigned or not, they know they're up against the nation's number one team," he said.

Linebacker Greg Collins, Notre Dame's co-captain, said he saw no difficulty in getting the Irish up for Alabama. "I know the seniors especially want to go out a winner and help Ara go out a winner," he said.

A.D. receives another honor

PALO ALTO (AP)—Anthony Davis of the University of Southern California has another honor, the Pop Warner Award, to take into his final college football appearance, the Rose Bowl on Jan. 1.

The all-America running back was selected winner of the Palo Club's award today and will be presented the trophy Jan. 28 at the club's banquet. It goes to the player voted the outstanding collegiate performer on the West Coast.

Other Trojans who have won the award include the 1973 winner, Lynn Swann.

Huskers eye 'best game of the year'

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—The Nebraska football team flew to New Orleans Tuesday morning to prepare for a New Year's Eve clash with Florida in the Sugar Bowl.

Coach Tom Osborne said, "We plan to push a little harder the first three or four days, but we probably won't have any full scrimmages before the game."

"If we had to play tomorrow, I think we could play a respectable game," he said. "We've got everything in defensively and offensively. Just a little conditioning and polishing this next week and we'll be ready."

"I'd like to see us have our best game of the year down here. I don't think we've had our best game yet. At least, I hope not."

"Overall, I feel that we're better than last year. We've scored more, gained more yards and I think our running game is better. Our offensive line is better and we're as good in running backs."

LOEL SCHRADER

Woody calls McKay leading innovator

Please understand, the guy isn't prejudiced. But Woody Hayes says college football is the greatest sports invention since the box spring.

"The game has enormous versatility," says the Ohio State coach, who really doesn't need to peddle any more tickets since the Rose Bowl game between his Buckeyes and USC on New Year's Day already is a sellout.

After genuflecting in the direction of John McKay ("he's top innovator of the last 15 years"), Hayes marvels over the athletic ability of the current crop of college athletes.

"The adjustments they make... well, 20 years ago, I would have said it couldn't be done," says Hayes. "As a matter of fact, it couldn't have been done. Certainly it couldn't have been done under the one-plateau system some people are advocating."

Hayes delineates four distinct types of offenses being employed by college teams—in contrast, he says, to the "stereotyped football being played by others."

"Take the offense we use, the I-formation," he says. "I'm not ashamed to admit we learned it from McKay. Of course, he's using a few techniques of ours now."

"The I-formation lets you run the tailback to either side of the line with equal effectiveness. It has produced some great tailbacks, especially at Southern California."

Modesty overcame Hayes at this juncture.

"We had the great honor of stopping Mike Garrett back in Columbus," he says. "We also played against the best of them all, O.J. Simpson. Now we face this man, A.D. (Anthony Davis), who is a great back in every way."

McKay has built his offense around the great tailbacks, and we have, too. The guy we have now (Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin) isn't bad, you know."

"THE POINT I WANT to make is that the teams who are up there in the rankings have had great tailbacks, but they also have good running quarterbacks. This takes the pressure off the tailback."

"The system has given the game great versatility, which you don't find in other football."

After I-balling the offense employed by the Trojans and the Buckeyes, Woody turned to the Veer-T.

"This is an offense in which your quarterback has to be a runner as well as a passer," he says. "It poses problems for a defense."

Hayes gets a distasteful look on his face when he talks about the Wishbone.

"It's strictly a running formation because you can only get two receivers out there," he says. "But a couple of teams using it are up there in the rankings—Alabama and Texas."

A double-take appears contrived.

"Oh, yes, I forgot about Oklahoma," he says.

All the coaches voting in United Press International's poll forgot the Sooners this season after agreeing at their coaches' convention that any team serving probationary time with the National Collegiate Athletic Association shouldn't be worthy of national mention.

"The offense you folks out here on the coast saw three weeks ago (Notre Dame) was taken from Dave Nelson of Delaware," says Hayes. "It's a multiple-type offense with a lot of misdirection."

Forest Evashevski popularized it at Iowa and Paul Dietzel took it to Louisiana State and won a national championship.

"That's what Notre Dame was using when it ran up 24 points in the first half against USC."

WOODY EXPLAINED why he had gotten a reputation for employing a "three yards and a cloud of dust" at Ohio State.

"We were playing one-plateau football and, in order to win, we figured we had to have a good defense first," he says. "The techniques of blocking for the run and tackling are somewhat similar, so we concentrated on those techniques."

"We didn't have time to develop an intricate offense. We figured if we could run for 275 yards per game, we could score four times. Under most circumstances, that should be enough to win."

One-plateau football has been gone for years, but Hayes still sticks to a ground attack. The Buckeyes averaged fewer than 10 passes per game this past season.

"Oh, we throw," says Woody. "Brian Baschnagel caught six passes in one game this year."

Hayes grins. "We threatened to bench him."

Maybe it isn't the type of offense that makes college football so interesting. It's probably the cast of characters.

OL EBENEZER—

Kroc, the Padres' owner, for taking over the public address system.

"What did the old hamburger king say?"

"All he said was, 'Ladies and gentlemen, I suffer with you. I've never seen such stupid ballplaying in my life.'"

"I'm confused. A football owner gets in trouble for lying, baseball owner for being honest."

THAT'S THE WAY the ball bounces, Eb. Which reminds me—the Lakers are having a few problems this year. Jerry West decided to become a fulltime amateur golfer at $200,000 a year.

"Don't they still have all those other good players?"

Well, they tried moving a guard, Pat Riley, to forward.

"Isn't he too short to play forward?"

Yes, but he said, "The bigger men I'll be playing against will have trouble sticking with me because of my quickness."

"How quick was he?"

Not as quick as the coach was in moving him back to guard.

MY, IT HAS been another interesting year. There are so many teams now it's had to keep up."

Yes, Dennis Murphy said a couple of months ago that sports could be in trouble because fans are becoming saturated.

"Who's Dennis Murphy?"

He's president of the World Hockey Association—and he also helped found World Team Tennis and the American Basketball Association.

"Oh, yes, a friend of Gary Davidson. Say, that forlorn little fellow out there in the cold looks a little like Gary Davidson. Seems to be saying something to everybody passing by. Can you tell what he's saying?"

It sounds like—yes, he's saying, "God bless us, every one."

Pro grid briefs

STEELERS—Running back Tyronn Flacco, who missed five weeks of the season with a hamstring pull, has cleared a physical checkup and been declared fit for Sunday's NFL playoff game against Oakland. Reserve running back Reggie Harrison, however, is lost with the same problem—a hamstring pull.

RENGALS—Free safety Tommy Cavanaugh has been selected to replace the injured Jake Scott on the American Football Conference team in the Pro Bowl Jan. 20. Scott was injured during Miami's playoff loss to Oakland last Saturday.

Bible eases Bradshaw's turbulence

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Terry Bradshaw, a witness for Christ before large audiences at the age of 15, says he has returned to a faith which slipped away during the past turbulent year of his life.

Last spring, the Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback was divorced from his wife, Melissa, a former Miss Teen-Age America. In training camp before the regular National Football League season he lost his starting role to Joe Gilliam.

He came back to start three games in mid-season before giving way again, this time to Terry Hanratty.

While Steeler coach Chuck Noll said he was looking for someone to take charge of the offense, pressure from the fans and the local press was intense.

"One day I was sitting in my apartment and I kind of got all choked up," Bradshaw says quietly. "I couldn't take it anymore."

"I decided to get back with it...go back to reading the Bible. Everybody needs something. Things go bad, you go someplace, to somebody."

Bradshaw, 28, says the problems of divorce and his performance on the field were compounded by his inability to tap the faith he had learned on since adolescence.

"I'd gotten away from it and that bothered me. I said to myself, 'Shoot, I can't handle this alone.'"

He is reluctant to talk about his faith.

"I haven't said anything," Bradshaw said. "I don't like to talk about being religious. I'm not. I'm just a Christian with a commitment. The last six weeks, I've gotten back to it."

In the last six weeks Bradshaw seems to have also matured as a quarterback. His play-calling has become more diversified as his passing percentage has grown.

Over the course of the regular season, Bradshaw completed 45.3 per cent of his passes. But in the last two regular season games, victories over

New England and Cincinnati, he completed 62.1 per cent.

In last Sunday's 32-14 American Football Conference playoff victory over Buffalo, he connected on 12 of 19 attempts (63.3 per cent) and ran for 48 yards while calling several touchdown series that had the Bills' defense reeling.

Noll called the performance Bradshaw's finest in the NFL.

Bradshaw refuses to connect his improvement on the field with his newly regained personal tranquility.

"I'm not saying that I'm playing better because of getting back to my faith. It's just something I believe in. It helps me accept the good and the bad."

Murdoch puts 'D' in Kings' defense

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

No one knows the feeling better than Rodney Dangerfield. The big guys of pro hockey don't command the respect they once did.

The Kings used to shake at the thought of playing the likes of Boston, Montreal, Chicago, the New York Rangers, Toronto and Detroit. But not any longer.

One of the key reasons for the Kings' rise to the summit this season has been its stout defense, easily the best in the National Hockey League during the first half of the year.

The 28-year-old helmeted defenseman doesn't think the Kings are playing over their heads, either.

"At the outset of the season our objective was to reach the playoffs and get second place. But if we keep playing our system, there's no reason we can't win the division."

"I think most of the players felt second place was more realistic. But more and more they're starting to see that we have a good chance of winning. I'm optimistic. I think we can make a run for it."

The Kings resume their chase of the division-leading Canadiens Thursday night when they engage Vancouver under the Forum's big top.

"As far as Montreal is concerned, they do have more depth than us. But in talking with Montreal players, I know they feel Ken Dryden isn't playing now as well as he did two years ago. The year's lay-off hurt. They may catch fire, but we can beat them out."

The 6-0, 190-pound Murdoch was acquired from Montreal on May 29, 1973. Nicknamed "Mud," Murdoch admits he's never been timid when it came to shooting.

The Kings' leading scorer on the blue line corps, Murdoch explains, "I was a forward until my final year in college when my coach changed me to defense. Now I wouldn't want to go back to forward."

"I like the freedom that defense gives you. The whole play is in front of you. When you play a wing you have the duty to go up and down. It's a lot tougher when half of the game is being played in back of you."

"Years ago they'd use the slower, less mobile skater on defense. Many defensemen now are like a fourth forward. Someone like Bobby Orr is more offensive than a lot of forwards."

Asked to explain the Kings' early success, Murdoch said, "I think it's a combination of things. We play a system. Bob (Pulford) has been drilling us to play a tight system. It's not a flashy system. We're playing a close, checking game. Rogie's been great in goal. One thing about our system—we can't afford to make a mistake."

Last season Murdoch played with three different defensemen before the Kings dealt Gilles Marotte to the N.Y. Rangers in return for Shelly Kannegger.

"Gilles and I didn't hit it off. We played a half season but our plus and minus rating was the worst on the team. We just didn't complement each other."

"Then we got Shelly and it seemed like we were able to click together. We play relatively the same game. We talk a lot to each other on the ice. As an example, Shelly might have two players on him and maybe he's not aware. I tell him what's going on. I might tell him to freeze the puck, or to keep working."

Murdoch is quick to point out how happy he is to be living in Southern California.

"As soon as I was traded, we bought a house in Rolling Hills. We own one horse and board another one in our backyard. If we have an off day I like to get up early and take a ride. Before we moved here my wife and I took riding lessons. We enjoyed it so much we bought a horse lot. I didn't want my children growing up in a home with only a cement patio and pool. I wanted a place with trees and animals. With our place we can keep horses."

"One big thing I like about the Kings is they've shown a lot of confidence in me. I think the team has reached a certain maturity. Our big objective now is not to lose two games in a row."

"Another thing—I'm more relaxed. When I was with Montreal, they'd carry five or six extra players. Here you don't feel the pressure that if you make a mistake you won't play, or that you're letting everyone down."

It's safe to say Murdoch hasn't let the Kings down this season. In fact, he's helped provide the push

LBSU HOSTS CLINIC FOR GYMNASTICS

The first Southern California Holiday gymnastics clinic, hosted by Long Beach State University, opens a five-day run Thursday in the 49er gymnasium.

The clinic will offer instruction on all Olympic gymnastic events and will be under the direction of Yoshi Takei, head gym coach at LBSU.

Registration fee is $28 and participation is open to anyone above eight years of age. Classes will be held each day from 10 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4 p.m.

Rykovich dies of cancer at 51

MERRILLVILLE, Ind. (AP)—Services will be held Thursday for Julius Rykovich, 51, former Chicago Bear and Notre Dame football player who died Monday of cancer.

Rykovich was a half-back on the 1943 Notre Dame national championship football team.

GARY ELLIS

Merry Christmas, Mrs. Football Coach

Hopefully, Santa Claus didn't get stuck in the fireplace and he brought you all the goodies you had hoped for.

The Christmas rush is over and deep down in everyone's heart all the effort, forechecking in the crowds and planning paid handsome dividends.

Most adults had weeks to battle the crowds, compile shopping lists and attend a few parties. But several wives didn't—football coaches' wives.

Take, for example, Gloria Thomas, wife of Neff coach Stan, and Linda Massick, wife of St. John Bosco coach George.

Because of the extended CIF playoffs, these wives were without husbands for an extra week, the last week of Christmas shopping. But the women remained undaunted because their husbands were battling for CIF football championships.

Contacted last week, both women were ready for the big day.

"I KEEP telling my children, 'Santa Claus is coming'—but he'll be wearing a football uniform and passing out footballs," laughed Gloria. "I just can't believe Christmas is Wednesday and the playoffs are Friday."

Gloria admitted to being a little behind the Christmas rush.

"People who aren't in football can't accept the fact we don't do anything until after the playoffs. They start having Christmas parties and we can't accept invitations. In the playoffs, it's difficult to plan ahead, you don't know if your husband will win or lose.

"But Stan decided on Dec. 13, Christmas was still going to come, regardless of football. He put up the tree and lights but all the time he was muttering to himself. I think he was trying to decide what plays to call."

Don't assume football wives are widows during the season.

"I haven't done much shopping but we have a lot of people around us during the season. Stan's only home once during the weekend and when the rest of the family comes over, he talks football. We're never alone. But I enjoy everything."

Gloria realizes her husband was under tremendous strain. "At breakfast, instead of talking about Christmas, he'd recap the season."

Has this bothered the mother of four, Chris 11, Craig 10, Carrie 6 and Cindy six months ("we're slow thinkers," she explained. Even our dog's name begins with a 'C')?

"I learned a long time ago football is Stan's first love and he channels all his time and thoughts toward it during the season. I've just resigned myself and now I sit back and handle the family during the season. I enjoy football and if I can help him in any way that's my contribution to his job."

"Stan radiates football throughout the family. Our kids get very excited and they really 'get up' for the games. We're all very involved in his job."

The final weekend saw hectic shopping in the Thomas family.

"I'm sure Stan will finish his shopping and to be honest, I'm not done yet, either. But I attribute it to our new baby rather than to football."

"One thing for sure, we'll have a happy holiday and I'll be able to say it was a very good year."

LINDA MASSICK defied the odds.

"We've done our shopping and our tree has been up for a while," she said. "It's so exciting to get to the finals but it's worth it. It's difficult but worth it."

"When everything goes to the 20th it really puts everyone in a bind. But we got our shopping completed."

"George came home one night and was watching films and I told him we had to shop. He kind of hemmed and hawed and we started our shopping at 9:15 p.m. and finished at midnight. But we were organized and it was worth it."

George, like his peer in La Mirada, arrives home at 6:30 in the evening during the week. On Wednesdays he takes the family, Dana Lynn 7 and Denny 4½, to dinner then attends a booster meeting. He works weekends.

"George is tired and he has a terrible cold and I know he's exhausted but we're going to the Coliseum with the kids and have a good time," said Linda.

"George helped me put up the tree—my dad and I picked the tree—and we decorated it one night. We have a player piano and we put on a roll and sang songs. George tries to make matters easy on us. The season is late but I feel I'm lucky."

"Although the hours are long we, the family, can get involved in his work. A lot of times the kids and I go to practice just to watch. We spend a lot of time at school and I'm proud and happy to be a coach's wife."

Bowl on New Year's Day.

"I think it is going to be quite a different story this year," says Cobb, looking back to Ohio State's 42-21 victory over USC last Jan. 1.

"The breaks are coming our way. Don't get me wrong—we respect Ohio State. Archie Griffin is a super running back and Cornelius Greene is a super scrambler at quarterback."

"There is no way we are going to underestimate the Buckeyes. They are a great team."

Although academic pursuits always have interested Cobb, he says he wouldn't have been satisfied to attend college without participating in athletics.

"My father, Lillard, was a pitcher in the black professional league and he encouraged me. My mother, Dovie Mae, did all she could to give me the body for athletics."

"I was the smallest baby she had among six children and I stayed small. I never ate. She used to take me to the doctor all the time to find out why I wouldn't eat."

"When I was in eighth grade, I tried Pop Warner football, but didn't like it. Then, in my freshman year at Notre Dame High School, the new coach, Robert Stangel, told me I could be good and encouraged me to come out for football."

"He said I could be all-league, all-CIF and win Player of the Year honors. I thought he was crazy, but I did what he told me to do. Without having him as a super coach, I would never have made it at USC."

The coach and his former pupil still are close.

"He came to the USC-Notre Dame game and was happy to see me do well," says Cobb.

"I was given an opportunity to get a fine high school education. I remember how surprised I was when I started college and discovered other students hadn't had Algebra 1 and 2, geometry, trigonometry, physicals, chemistry and mathematical analysis."

"I thought high school students everywhere were required to take those courses, as we were in high school."

That is the way Marvin Cobb is. He takes the difficult and makes it look easy.

John Sagehorn: Scoring points at SMU

John Sagehorn wasn't a child prodigy.

He may not have learned to walk until the first grade, and he probably didn't put a round ball through a ten-foot hoop before he was 14.

It's not that John hasn't got it—he's just a slow starter. Once he gets going, it's another story.

Last season, Sagehorn came to Southern Methodist University sporting long state honors from Long Beach City College, after earning all-Southern California recognition at Wilson High, where he was the city MVP his senior year.

He turned down offers from several west coast schools, including Long Beach State, Pepperdine, and California to come to SMU.

He was ballyhooed as the man who could step right in and take charge—the perfect outside shooting complement to the Mustangs' front-line strength.

Well, after Bob Pre-witt's troops had completed their non-conference schedule and were about to start playing for keeps, John was hitting a torrid 19.7 per cent from the field. The Ponies lost their first two SWC contests, and Sagehorn lost his starting spot to sixth-man Rick Billik for SMU's trip to Arkansas.

The Razorback bench must have possessed mystical powers, because Sagehorn came off it in the second half and changed from a mild-mannered student into the proverbial Mr. Hyde, hitting four in a row and six of 10. SMU lost the game anyway, 89-88, but the spark had been lit.

During the next 11 games, the Ponies won 10, earning them SWC runner-up status and a trip to the Collegiate Commissioners Tournament in St. Louis. Sagehorn's turnaround was simultaneous, as John hit 43 per cent of his shots, including several clutch buckets in a 74-72 win over eventual champion Texas.

Sagehorn also was second on the squad in assists with 61, a significant factor as the Mustangs began to jell as a team. "He helped us a lot," said graduated guard Zack Thiel. "He is a very unselfish player and he made the rest of us that way."

"I get just as much satisfaction from a good pass that leads to a basket as I do scoring," shrugs Sagehorn. "When I was recruited they told me they needed someone to move the ball around. That suits me fine."

When he's not on the court, John is moving baseballs around and out of various SWC ballparks as starting center fielder.

Joining the club after the CCA basketball tournament last March, Sagehorn was hitting a respectable .278 after the first 10 games, but then caught fire and wound up as one of the conference's leading hitters at .364. He stole 11 bases, and committed only one error in his 23 games.

Baseball was anything but new to the native Californian. He was all-state in high school, batting .367. He added a .369 mark his second year at L.B.C.C. One of Sage-horn's high school teammates was American League MVP Jeff Burroughs of the Texas Rangers.

While in the depths of his early-season shooting woes last year, he drew an analogy between shooting a basketball and hitting a baseball.

"A lot of shooting is upstairs, and hitting is the same way," he said. "You can work and practice as much as you like, but you've got to have the right mental attitude or it won't work in a game."

Still, boosted by his late-season surge, Sagehorn was one of the remaining bright spots on an SMU cage squad decimated by every conceivable evil but a Yugo-slavian invasion. He scored 30 points in the annual Red-Blue intrasquad game, hitting 11-of-13 shot from the field. Then it was Clark Kent revisited.

JOHN SAGEHORN
Proverbial Mr. Hyde

Los Alamitos switches to night racing tonight

National quarter horse training leader D. Wayne Lukas, approaching the 150-win plateau this year, will saddle six horses, including Los Alamitos track record-holder Flight 109 and recent acquisition Parfame, in the 300-yard St. Nicholas Express to night at Los Alamitos switches to 7:45 night racing.

After 15 days of successful day-time racing, the Horsemen's Quarter Horse Racing Association begins on Christmas with the popular Express race and a group of strolling minstrels who will entertain the holiday crowd with favorite Christmas tunes.

The Express, which took its current 300-yard format in 1973, attracted a total of 18 horses, including racing secretary Donald Smith to split the dash into two, $10,000 divisions.

The second heat drew most of the contention and four of the six horses entered by leading trainer D. Wayne Lukas with Favoritism expected to fall to record-holder Flight 109. Others in the field are Native Empress, Laico Bird 2, Elan Again, Moolah Diamond, I'm Kipity, Gold Copy, Gay Number and Gray Dancer.

The first dash will be headed by Parfame and defending Express winner Plunder Bay as well as I'ma On, Out Jet, Burma Shan, Al's Alibi, Amber Due, Air Cooled and Heck.

Flight 109, winner of eight stakes races the past two years, established the 'Alamitos 300-yard record of 15.41 seconds here last summer when he won the Firecracker Express.

The 7-year-old gelding, who seems assured of earning champion older gelding honors in the nation this year, was sixth last Sunday behind Don Guerro in the $50,000 Champion of Champions and will be asked to carry highweight of 128 pounds.

ROCKY DENUEDO, the champion 3-year-old two winters ago, picked up his second triumph of the current meeting Tuesday afternoon in the featured Pebble Beach purse.

Rocky Denuedo, the 4-year-old son of Kiptydo, finished a half-length in front of Chargin' Chick.

Steelers no longer an easy mark, say Raiders

OAKLAND (UPI) — It was work as usual on Christmas day for the Oakland Raiders, who planned a rugged workout for their weekend American Football Conference title clash with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

With a shot at the Super Bowl and a potential $25,000 per man hanging in the balance, no one was complaining.

"We'll quit soon enough on Christmas day to have dinner with our families, and the players with children will have enough time Christmas morning to watch them open the presents," said coach John Madden.

"It's a typical week of preparation for us. There is no deviation from our regular schedule. We are treating Sunday's game, from a point of practice, the same as any other."

The Raiders beat the Steelers easily in the playoffs last year, then shut them out 17-0 earlier this year. But all that means nothing, they feel.

"The Steelers are going to come in here riding high," said linebacker Gerald Irons. "They made their win over the Buffalo Bills Sunday (13-14) look easy and effortless. They were awesome, nothing like the team we played earlier this year."

Christmas break for Vikings—very brief

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — The Minnesota Vikings worked out at snowy Metropolitan Stadium Tuesday and then began a super-short Christmas holiday — with visions of a win over the Rams dancing in their heads.

The Vikings were allowed to join their families and friends for Christmas Eve and Christmas morning before they are scheduled to leave Wednesday afternoon for warmer Oklahoma, where they will practice two days for Sunday's National Football Conference title game.

Temperatures were in the 20s Tuesday and snow flurried in the air at the site of the game.

The Vikings were rated a four-point favorite but coach Bud Grant wasn't taking anything for granted.

The Vikings focused their defensive unit on the Rams' Lawrence McCutcheon, the NFC's leading rusher this season with 1,109 yards; the passing of quarterback James Harris and the receiving talents of Hal Jackson and Jack Snow. He also talked at some length of Los Angeles' running back Jim Bertelsen.

"Oh, he's a good runner, all right and a good passer, catcher, too," the Vikings coach said. "But Bertelsen's greatest asset to the Rams is his talent as a blocker."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Thursday

Your birthday today: You respond to your past by strong and renewed efforts to improve your mind and skills and bury all negative trends from previous experience. Relationships become complex and very difficult to manage if you take anyone for granted. Today's natives are prone to be friendly brothers to the world.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Start early if you want to trade anything in for something else. Many people have the same idea. Keep travels brief and only for specific purposes.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Concentrate on work. Balance your local situation and bring yourself up-to-date. Review and renegotiate money deals; put off what you can.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Allow for the needs and wishes of those you love as you organize work on neglected projects. Conserve ready cash for an upcoming, extraordinary opportunity.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Don't promise any more than you can deliver. Let others lead the way or find their own route; just take care of yourself.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): No real problems exist today unless your own actions generate them. Let well enough alone as you pursue normal work routines. Get some extra rest tonight.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Yesterday's doings reflect in small adjustments and useless exchanges. Your tact is its own reward. Relationships improve markedly in later hours.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your decision-making again confuses associates. Expert advice isn't always what it should be, but consider it as you formulate final plans.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A moderate approach is essential, particularly if you are responsible for others' money. Seek inside facts or learn for yourself just say to yourself: wait.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Think what you're saying to avoid being misunderstood. A touch of formality helps in today's activity. Distant news is sketchy; get more details.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Just when things seem to be humming smoothly, resistance arises in unexpected quarters. A discreet inquiry clears up a mystery.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Speculation turns into a fiasco today, particularly if you're supposed to do something extra as a personal favor. You turn up a minor surprise in research or promotion.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Everybody at home has enough to do. Let your normal work habits. If you received a holiday bonus, don't talk about it; simply add to your savings.

Exceptional holiday programs

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

Channel switching will be the name of the game today as area viewers take full advantage of some exceptionally fine holiday programming, seasonally oriented or otherwise.

Flipping channels, here are some of the best and brightest:

CHANNEL 2

At 7:30 p.m., Lorne Greene's Last of the Wild series tells the story of the destruction of great buffalo herds on three continents. Esther Rolle and Lloyd Bridges are co-guest stars of Tony Orlando, who also introduces his 73-year-old grandmother as a Yule feature on Tony Orlando and Dawn, 8 p.m.

In back-to-back segments of The Detectives, private eye Cannon (William Conrad) seeks at 9 to solve a murder whose victim might be the Voice from the Grave. And at 10, a vicious gangster takes over a small town hospital, forcing its staff to neglect other patients to save a wounded hood, in The Manhunter.

CHANNEL 4

The role of religion in current American life will be discussed at 7 a.m. by five noted religious leaders — representing three major faiths — who are participating in a Today show. An Episcopal communion will be broadcast live from Washington's National Cathedral at 10 a.m., with U.S. Presiding Bishop John M. Allin celebrating.

Each member of the Charles Ingalls family decides what to get the others as Christmas gifts, but all are short of cash in that Little House on the Prairie. Episode is entitled Christmas at Plum Creek, comes on at 8 p.m. A 10 p.m. Petrocelli segment, The Golden Cage, deals with conflict between wife and vindictive millionaire husband.

CHANNEL 5

What has to be one of the day's more emotionally gripping programs is a Christmas Mass at 12:30 p.m. in which mentally retarded young people from across the Basin participate by singing and dancing. Timothy Cardinal Manning of the Los Angeles archdiocese, and Fr. Michael Gelsenan will celebrate.

CHANNEL 7

Navidad Encantada - Enchanted Christmas, a Mexican-American/Indian Mass in the centuries-old Church of San Felipe de Neri, Albuquerque, N.M., will be telecast at noon. And at 8:30 p.m., widower Robert Young, after marrying off four of his daughters in one day, finds it difficult to announce his own wedding plans on My Darling Daughters' Anniversary. Salute to Dr. Martin Luther King, a special taped earlier this year in honor of the slain civil rights leader, will be rebroadcast at 11:30 p.m. Among those appearing: Gregg Morris, Della Reese, Isaac Hayes, Billy Dee Williams, Lily Tomlin, Raymond St. Jacques, Roscoe Lee Brown, Sly Stone, Gail Fisher, David Steinberg, Paula Kelly, Mayor Tom Bradley, Congresswoman Yvonne Braithwaite Burke, the Rev. Dr. Thomas Kilgore and Mrs. Coretta King, the widow.

CHANNEL 9

A repeat of The Subject Is Roses - 1975, a one-hour documentary tracing the history of Pasadena's famed Tournament of Roses from its inception, is set for 5 p.m., with David Hartman as host-narrator.

CHANNEL 11

A sign language Christmas mass introduced by the channel's sign language newscaster, Carol McEvoy, airs at 7:30 a.m. Fr. P.P. Collins, diocesan special services department director, celebrates. A 30-minute children's fantasy, The Legend of the Christmas Tree, is scheduled for 8 a.m.

right in the middle of present-opening time.

Backstage at the Zoo, the L.A. zoo, needless to say, comprehensively toured behind-the-scenes at 11 a.m. Joining Mayor Bradley in the trip will be James Stewart, Mary Tyler Moore, Amanda Blake, Gregg Morris, Joseph Campanella and hostess Betty White.

ON RADIO

Long Beach's own KLOS-FM, 88.1, will provide Options at 7 p.m. This National Public Radio Network-produced show deals with the meaning of Christmas as interpreted by such well-known authors as Jan Struther, Roark Bradford and H.L. Mencken, the non-religious sage of Baltimore.

Merry Christmas — and good watching!

CBS grants $1 million to CPB

CBS is granting $1 million to the Corp. for Public Broadcasting over the next three years. CBS initially gave $1 million to public broadcasting in 1968 to help launch CPB.

Under the terms of the grant, announced by CBS chairman William S. Paley, CPB will receive $250,000 for audience research and the study of means for attracting additional individual support throughout the public TV system.

Paley said most of the remainder of the contribution would go to the five public broadcasting stations located in cities where CBS owned and operated an affiliate.

These stations are located in New York, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Chicago and St. Louis. The funds will go to finance on-the-air fund raising efforts directed toward expanding individual support. Locally, KCET Channel 28 receive $150,000.

Healthy people hit for perpetuating myth

Suicides don't go up during Yule, expert says

By STEVE HEMMERICK
Ridder News Service

An expert on suicide believes normally healthy people are perpetuating a myth that says suicides increase during the Christmas holidays.

"Suicides don't go up during the holidays. It's a myth," said Sam M. Heilig, executive director of the Los Angeles Suicide Prevention Center and Institute for Studies of Self-Destructive Behaviors.

He added, "December is the month with the lowest number of suicides."

It is "well" people who often become depressed during the holidays, Heilig said, and therefore come to the conclusion that the number of suicides increase.

But if these normal people are perpetuating a myth, the media is reinforcing it.

In recent weeks Heilig has been contacted by one network news show, television stations and numerous reporters. All, he said, wanted to get the story on the increase in suicides during the holidays. None of them got that story—at least not from him.

A psychiatrist at the UCLA Psychiatric Center,

Dr. Edwin Schneidman, agrees with Heilig. "I just completed a paper on it. As far as I can ascertain, suicides do not go up in December."

Not only do they not go up, according to Heilig, but they go down.

The people who tend to commit suicide are often the isolated, alcoholic, lonely and antisocial people, he explained. For example, an elderly widower might be contemplating suicide.

But at Christmas time, his life would "brighten up," said Heilig. "People might slap him on the back and say, 'Let's have a cup of coffee together or let's have a drink.'"

Others, he said, are invited out for dinner. People who attend church tend to get out and visit the abandoned and the orphaned. "At Christmas time the people who have a lot of troubles tend to have more social contact."

While the potential victims of suicide are feeling better, some usually happy people begin to feel depressed, Heilig said that feeling can even be used as a test of your mental health.

"If you're depressed at Christmas time, you are, psychologically, probably in good shape," he said.

Part of the reason "well" people become depressed during the holidays, Heilig believes, is because some of the "spirit" is missing.

"Go to a department store on Saturday and then go to church on Sunday. See where the action is," he said. He added, "Think of all the things written in Christmas cards. Is any of that realized—peace, family brotherhood?"

If the Christmas "warmth" could be extended the year around, he believes there might be a "significant" drop in the number of suicides.

Lately, youths and young men and women seem to need that warmth more than ever. Heilig said his studies have shown the suicide rate for 15- to 19-year-old women has increased 2,000 per cent in the last decade.

Inmates answer letters to Santa

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind. (AP)—Sitting in his state prison cell, the prisoner took a letter from its envelope and began to read:

"Dear Santa Claus,

"These are some of the things I want for Christmas. A pair of ice skates, a croquet set, a beauty salon for my Barbie doll, a Barbie town house.

The letter, in a child's careful printing, went on for three pages.

After several minutes of thought, the inmate began writing:

"Dear Laurie,

"Santa is a very busy man this time of the year but I see you have been a good little girl. I'm sure you will get some toys and candy. I wish you a Merry Christmas.

"Love,

"Santa"

The inmate was one of 10 at the Indiana State Prison participating in a

Stowaways bid asylum, held aboard

Two 22-year-old stowaways from Red China seeking asylum in this country are being retained today aboard an American flag ship which arrived in Los Angeles Harbor early Tuesday morning.

Department of Immigration officials said the two men boarded the SS Thomas Cuffe, a Pacific Far East Line freighter, in Hong Kong. The vessel then called at Osaka, Japan, but the Japanese government refused to allow the stowaways to come ashore.

Joseph Suresck, District Director of Immigration, said the men were being considered as applicants for asylum in this country and that officials in Washington have been asked how the matter should be handled. He noted that stowing away on an American ship is a crime but doubted the FBI would take action until local immigration officials hear from Washington.

A spokesman for the Chinese Information Service said the men were Liang Kuo-chang and Wu Chao. However, immigration officials listed them as Leong Kwok-keong and Chew Ng.

Suresck said the two men told investigators they had not been engaged in any political activity in the People's Republic of China but simply wanted to leave the country.

Suresck said that because of the holiday today, he did not expect to hear from Washington before Thursday. The ship is due to sail Friday.

Ward calls for credit card OK at dog pounds

If Supervisor Baxter Ward has his way, payments for dogs in county pounds in the future may be made with credit cards.

Ward, chairman of the Department of Animal Control, told supervisors Tuesday he felt county pounds should accept Master Charges, BankAmericards, or other plastic money for license fees, in pound expenses and the like.

Ward said he felt the use of credit cards was warranted because inflation often reduces families' spending money.

Hizzoner prunes way to hospital

YUBA CITY (AP)—The last thing Mayor Joe Fraser remembers, he was climbing down a 17-foot ladder after pruning a neighbor's ash tree.

"The next thing I knew, I was on the ground," the 62-year-old mayor said Tuesday from his hospital bed. He suffered a concussion, two broken wrists and two broken ribs in the 14-foot fall.
